THE NORTHERN ECHO.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1892.

MR MORLEY AND THE EVICTED TENANTS.

The published correspondence concerning the Evicted Tenants' Commission which has been exchanged between Mr JOHN MORLEY and Sir FREDERICK MILNER is highly interesting. It shows that Mr MORLEY is entering on the high and heavy duty which has been devolved upon him of restoring peace and harmony between the Government of Ireland and the governed in a manly, practical, and impartial spirit. Thus the Times sneers at MR MORLEY "as this bookish and short-tempered doctrinaire," and accuses him of irritability and of having been "thrown into what ladies call 'a temper' by Sir FREDK. MILNER'S temperate appeal." But then justice, fairplay, or common sense is not to be expected from the Times when it has to discuss the words or actions of Mr MORLEY, or anyone also connected with the Liberal administration of Ireland. The irritability and temper which the Times alleges Mr MORLEY to have displayed towards Sir FREDERICK MILNER exist only in the disordered imagination of that organ. Sir FREDERICK MILNER says himself, in a letter to Mr MORLEY, which is printed in the Times, "I am very much obliged to you for your courteous letter of October 6th. I have endeavoured to read it in the spirit in which it was evidently written." Thus Sir FREDERICK MILNER himself accepts as courteous the communication in which the biassed vision of the Times discerns nothing but anger.

The object of Sir FREDERICK MILNER'S letter, which was written before the terms of reference to the Evicted Tenants' Commission were published, was to impress on Mr MORLEY the importance of inquiring into the circumstances and causes which led to eviction and of deciding whether it be true that the cause of the failure of Section 13 of the Land Act of 1891 was orders given by the Irish members and enforced by the National organisations. Mr MORLEY replied pointing out that he is not proposing to try either Irish members or Irish landlords; that he wishes to leave "inconclusive shuffles and barren skirmishes" to Parliament, press, and the platform. "I design," says Mr MORLEY, "the Commission to be an agent of healing and of peace, not an occasion for reviving old irritations; in other words, I mean business and not a mere move in an angry game." Every impartial man ought to be able to admit that Mr MORLEY here talks the language of conviction and of wisdom. The existence of these evicted tenants is a standing source of irritation and discontent which is seriously detrimental to social order in Ireland. Why the effort made by Mr BALFOUR to reinstate them by Section 13 of his last Land Act was not successful is not a question of much importance to anyone except Mr BALFOUR himself, who may feel that his reputation as a statesman is involved. The chief fact is that the section has failed, that whatever causes led to its failure are still in operation, while its own force has lapsed, and that, therefore, if success is to be achieved it must be by the adoption of some as yet untried means. The business of the Commission is to discover means whereby evicted tenants may justly be restored to their holdings. The fact that many at least of the evicted tenants ought to be restored was recognised by Mr BALFOUR when he framed Section 13 of his Act. The allegation of the Times, Sir FREDERICK MILNER, and others that the Commission is in itself a composition unfair to the landlords is merely one of those cries which are raised by political parties when they lose an argument. Had Mr MORLEY been able to form a Commission of angels they would have had to bear the brunt of hostile Tory criticism. It is said that there ought to be at least one landlord on the Commission. As a matter of fact the Commission does not contain one single tenant. It is simply a body of able and impartial men presided over by an English judge. It may be expected to do its work well: indeed it is most probably going to do it well and perform an amount of scavenging which might very well be left to the properly-constituted authority. Such a reformed dress was seen in Darlington Park yesterday, a neat costume of navy blue serge which only cannot be had at the Darlington boots. It is to be hoped that this fearless challenger of public opinion will find many to imitate her in so sensible a modification of accepted feminine attire.

A COLLIERY TO BE CLOSED.

The Whitehaven Colliery Company have decided, owing to the sharp competition in the coal trade which has recently arisen, to close their Wellington Pit. Nearly 500 men will be thrown out of employment.

SUDDEN DEATH OF MRS SYDNEY BUXTON.

Mrs Sydney Buxton, wife of the Colonial Under-Secretary, was found dead in bed on Thursday morning by her maid. The deceased lady drove out on Wednesday, and went to bed in the evening with a severe headache. Mr Sydney Buxton, M.P., was in London attending to his duties at the Colonial Office. Mrs Buxton was a daughter of Sir John Lubbock.

DARKEST ENGLAND.

The committee to inquire into the distribution of the "Darkest England" funds met yesterday at Lord Onslow's residence, the following members being present:—Sir Henry Fowler (Wolverhampton), Mr W. H. Lough, Lord Onslow, Mr Waterhouse, and Mr Robinson (secretary). In consequence of the lamented death of Mrs Buxton, wife of Mr Sydney Buxton, M.P., who is a member of this committee, the latter, after stating a considerable time, adjourned until Thursday next. The boxes containing the accounts of the expenditure in connection with the scheme are in the hands of Mr Waterhouse, who is carefully investigating them and preparing an analysis.

A WARSHIP ASHORE.

A Portsmouth correspondent telegraphs that the Seahorse, ocean tug, was on Thursday night ordered to leave Portsmouth at an hour's notice to the relief of the Howe. Private telegrams received at Portsmouth from the ship indicate that she is in an extremely critical position. The naval circles it is believed think the Howe must have gone aground in a fog, having been drawn out of her course by magnetic influence, as the weather has of late been extremely thick and foggy. The Howe, The Howe belongs to the Portsmouth division of the Channel Squadron. Her original cost was £635,170, to which has been added £265,168 for incidental expenses, and cost of maintenance, &c., after completion amounted to £2,565 8s. Writing on the 28th of October a correspondent on Rome stated that squadron would remain at Corunna for a week, and then go on to Arosa Bay. It would, therefore, seem that the vessels got under way on Wednesday to carry out this movement, and that it was while so engaged that the Howe drifted out of her course.

THE GUILDHALL BANQUET.

LETTER FROM MR GLADSTONE.

The Lord Mayor-Elect (Alderman Stuart Knill) has received the following autograph letter from the Prime Minister:—"Mr Lord Lord Mayor; "I am indeed sorry that after the days which I have taken for consideration I am obliged to ask your excuse for not attending your banquet on the 9th. For years past, I think only six or seven, I have, under the kind advice of my excellent friend and colleague, Sir Andrew Clark, withdrawn from all attendance at public banquets. I was hoped that on such an occasion as the celebration of the ship might allow an exception; but he has in decided terms advised me, and I have taken for consideration I am obliged to ask your pardon for our absence. I cannot close this note without congratulating the City on the spirit of loyalty and a long-standing which you are reported to have sustained in the discussions preceding your election the principles of religious freedom.—(Signed) W. E. Gladstone."

The reason why Lord Rosebery has been compelled to decline the invitation of the Lord Mayor-Elect to the same banquet is that he has accepted invitation to dine with the Prince of Wales at Sandringham on November 9th, which is the Prince's birthday.

THE SOCIETY SCANDAL.

THIRD DAY'S HEARING.

The hearing of the action for slander brought by Mrs Olivia Claudine Leader against Mrs Eleanor Sarah Smyth was resumed on Thursday in the Queen's Bench, London, before Mr Justice Day and a special jury. Amongst the witnesses called for the defence was the jeweller from whom Mrs Smyth purchased the brooch and case in 1887.—The jeweller said the brooch would have had a private mark inscribed with a sharp-pointed instrument to the pin. After careful investigation he failed to discover the mark in question on the brooch produced. The brooch was scratched a little but not recently. The maker of the brooch case was called, and said the case produced was not the case he made for the brooch. The case did not fit the brooch, and was never made for it.—Mr Pierpoint, solicitor for defendant, said the case bought with the brooch by Mrs Smyth, together with some papers in the case, was lost. Cross-examined by Mr Lockwood: Up till some time in May the case was conducted on the assumption that Mrs Leader's complaint was made on the 22nd. An amendment in the pleadings was made then changing the date to September 21st. 1891.—Darling, of Inchbold, Major-General Smyth, deposed that he first heard of the loss of the brooch on September 22nd.—Detective-Sergt. M'Guire, who investigated the circumstances attending the loss of the brooch, said Mr Blake bought the brooch on 22nd September from Mrs Leader.—A Mr Blake, who accompanied Mrs Leader to Egypt after her marriage, said he never saw Mrs Leader wear a brooch like the one produced. The hand and portions of letters received by Mrs Leader from Major-General Smyth were then read, in them no mention of a diamond brooch being sent.—Mrs Leader was twice recalled by Sir Edward Clarke, and after the evidence was closed Mr Lockwood addressed the jury for the defence.—Mr Lockwood afterwards addressed the jury, and the case was further adjourned.

The umpire awards 0·65d per ton to the machinemen and the same advance to the fillers, making the rates 3·75d.

THE THIRSK DISASTER

MESSAGES FROM THE QUEEN AND THE PRINCE OF WALES.

CLEARING AWAY THE DEBRIS.

IDENTIFICATION OF THE BODIES.

REMOVAL OF THE DEAD.

Mr Mundella, President of the Board of Trade, has received the following telegram from Sir Henry Ponsonby on behalf of the Queen:—"The Queen you convey to the sufferers from the Thirsk railway accident the Queen's sincere sympathy. She hopes the wounded are going on well."

A sympathetic message has been received by the railway officials at York from His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, who is at present the guest of Lord Londonderry at Wynyard Park, Durham, asking for particulars of the catastrophe.

(FROM OUR OWN REPORTER.)

Turiff, Thursday.

The scene of the distressing calamity was to-day visited by hundreds of the residents within an extensive radius of the spot where the collision occurred. There was little to repay them for the trouble except the properties of the wrecked locomotive, the disabled Pullman car, and the heaps of wreckage which lined both sides of the permanent way. By the exertions of the breakdown gangs everything that impeded traffic either on the up or down lines was removed by nine o'clock on Wednesday night, although the rails on the up line had to be slightly deflected for a few yards to permit of trains to run clear of the engine and the Pullman car, the removal of these being deferred until the next day next, when the absence of traffic will allow the time necessary for dealing with weights of such magnitude. It is understood that the carcass of the locomotive will be lifted bodily by a crane, and placed on trucks, for the use of the company's depôts; and the body of the Pullman car will be dealt with in a similar manner. The first train to run over the repaired up-line was the 7.8 p.m. from Newcastle on Wednesday night, and since then the traffic has been carried on as precisely as though no such lamentable occurrence had happened.

THE SCENE OF THE ACCIDENT.

As soon as the heavy ironwork of the dismantled rolling stock had been cleared from the wreck special attention was directed to a careful sifting of the ashes and other deposit left by the flames, and during this exhaustive process—which is still being carried on—several charred pieces of bodies were found, which it is believed are all that is left of the unfortunate victims, Miss M'Culloch and Mrs Mackenzie. Other articles found included the steel backs of corset, some fused copper coins, the rim of a purse, a few trinkets, and a bunch of keys, all of which were found beneath the ruins of the locomotive.

During Wednesday many relatives and friends of the deceased persons arrived at short intervals, and many most distressing scenes were witnessed, when those who had hoped to recognise their convicitions found themselves compelled to relinquish the last hope on being confronted with the cold corpse of their near and dear relatives or friends. The bodies awaited identification in the general waiting-room on the east platform of Thirsk Railway Station, the coffins being enclosed in coffins provided by the railway company, and as soon as the evidence of identification was taken by the coroner the coffins were screwed down ready for removal to the last resting-places. All the bodies—with the exception of that of Little Lottie Hamilton—were conveyed from Thirsk to-night, the Coroner making out the necessary certificates immediately on the conclusion of the inquest, and the railway company providing special trains for the carriage of the remains.

The most notable event of to-day was the holding of the inquest in the general waiting-room on the west or down platform of Thirsk Station, where Dr. J. S. Walton, coroner for the North Riding, took the bare evidence of identification and then adjourned the inquiry for a fortnight. The proceedings were conducted in special saloon car was placed at the disposal of the Coroner and the jury, who were conveyed to the scene of the disaster, returning about an hour afterwards.

CONDITION OF THE INJURED.

Only three of the most seriously injured passengers and the disabled Pullman car, remain in and near Thirsk, and of these Mr James Buchanan, who is in the Thirsk Memorial Hospital, Thirsk, passed a quiet night, and he is in a fair way to speedy recovery. The driver of the express, Robert Ewart, of Gateshead, is in a more serious condition, and much anxiety was proposed to make a direct communication to the Standing Joint Committee on the subject.—The West Hartlepool Local Board having written declining to throw open the playground after school hours a deputation was appointed to ask them to reconsider their decision.—Messrs Brydon & Co., printers, of West Hartlepool, wrote requesting the charges made against them by the Hartlepoole Trades and Labour Council to the effect that they were not paying the recognised trades union rate of wages, and inviting an investigation of their accounts with the charges.—Councillor Martin denied having any personal interest in the matter, and the subject dropped.—Councillor Gibson said he had proposed new railway scheme to the North with a view of making West Hartlepool connected was referred to a committee.

THE INQUEST.

The Coroner (Mr J. S. Walton) arrived at Thirsk soon after three o'clock, and at once proceeded to the waiting-room, where everything was in the same condition as yesterday. Those present were Mr Kaye-Butterworth (solicitor to the North-Eastern Railway Company), Mr Wilkinson (general passenger superintendent), Mr C. H. Dalton (representing the Railway Passengers' Assurance Company, Limited), Mr G. Jones (representing the Railway Officer (Dr. Watson) reported that the death-rate of the district continued satisfactorily low, it numbering 13·5 per 1,000 per annum, while the birth-rate was 30 per 1,000 per annum. Four cases of enteric fever and seven of scarlet fever had been notified during the month of October. No mortality had arisen during the year from the incidence of the disease.—It was resolved to adopt Mr Mackenzie's tender for the supply of newspapers and periodicals for the new library.—It was further decided to open the reading-room on the 9th inst, and Mr and Mrs Hutchinson were appointed caretakers.—Mr Thomas Wrightson, M.P., moved a vote of thanks to Mr Anderson for his services as chairman of the Local Board, and spoke in terms of high admiration of the valuable work which he had achieved in connection with the Board.—He was sure he would lill the civic chair of the new borough with the same ability and zeal which he had exhibited in the discharge of his duties as chairman of the old Board.—Mr John Steel, in seconding, referred to the kindness and courtesy displayed, and combined with ability, which invariable was manifested by Mr Anderson in the discharge of his public duties.—Mr Anderson made a suitable acknowledgement, and in response the Chairman said when ever his position might be in the future, he was sure he would have the same cheerfulness in his had received from the members of the old Board, and he also appreciated the services of the Clerk (Mr Watson) for his valuable services to the Board.—Mr J. S. Walton
