Australasian RECORD

Volume 56 WARBURTON, VICTORIA, FEBRUARY 18, 1952 Number 7

May it please Your Gracious Majesty, the Queen Mother, to accept on behalf of the Seventh-day Adventist Church of Australia, New Zealand, and the South Pacific Islands from the Dutch border of New Guinea to Pitcairn, our profound sympathy in Your Majesty's sorrow at the passing of His Gracious Majesty, the late King George VI. We desire to assure Your Majesty and the members of the Royal Family of our continued love and devotion and our prayers that God will sustain your Majesty through the days to come.

F. A. MOTE, President,
H. G. MOULDS, Secretary,
Australasian Inter-Union Conference of Seventh-day Adventists.

May it please your most Excellent Majesty, Queen Elizabeth the Second, to accept on behalf of the Seventh-day Adventist Church in Australia, New Zealand, and the South Pacific Islands from the Dutch border of New Guinea to Pitcairn, our sincerest sympathy and sorrow at the untimely passing of Your Majesty's illustrious and greatly beloved father, the late King George VI. As Your Majesty comes to the throne in these troublous times, may we assure Your Majesty of our loyalty, love, and devotion. Our prayers will ascend daily to Almighty God on behalf of Your Majesty and Your Majesty's Consort that He may grant Your Majesty wisdom and grace for the responsibilities placed upon Your Majesty.

F. A. MOTE, President,
H. G. MOULDS, Secretary,
Australasian Inter-Union Conference of Seventh-day Adventists.

The Foundation of the Throne

MARIAN M. HAY

THE people of the British Empire were shocked and saddened as the news came through on the night of February 6 that their beloved sovereign, King George VI, had passed away in his sleep.

Our sense of personal loss is deep, for the royal family have a special place in the hearts and affections of their people. It is the royal family that unite the British Commonwealth into a family of nations, and the loss is felt directly by each citizen.

We would thankfully record our loyalty to the Crown of Great Britain, and our gratitude for the long tradition of freedom that is ours as subjects of the British Empire. We thank God for our royal family, who have lived in the searching light of their high office, and have so devotedly borne its heavy burdens. As a family unit they have shown the beauty of home life, the power of spiritual values, and the courage and poise that complete devotion to duty calls forth.

We rejoice that in the person of King George VI we had a king whose personal character and private life have called forth a love and respect no less deep than the loyalty which his high office commanded.

Our thoughts are with the Queen Mother we love so well, who has stood by her husband with such royal grace and womanly charm. May her heart find consolation from the divine Source of all comfort, and from the knowledge that, the world around, millions are sharing her sorrow and feeling with her in her grief.

We would pray, too, for a special measure of divine grace for our Queen who is called, in the very hour of her grief and loss, to take up the great task as head of the British Commonwealth. We are confident that the great traditions upon which the British Throne is founded, so fully exemplified in the life of her father, will be ably and intelligently upheld by our reigning Queen.

The greatness of England rests upon her devotion to the eternal principles of truth and righteousness. In their public utterances the late King and Queen have frequently expressed their personal faith in the Bible. Said the Queen Mother in her speech at the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Bible Reading Fellowship, in June, 1947:—

"If through prayer and Bible reading we learn to live each day in the strength and power of God, we may well go forward with confidence and hope. . . . These are challenging days in the history of the world. A new era is struggling to be born, and what sort is it to be? We in our nation and empire are called to give a moral lead to the world, and we can only do this if we are true to our great Christian traditions."

Again, in a Festival of Britain message, the Queen Mother said:—

"Both the King and I long to see the Bible back where it ought to be as a guide and comfort in the homes and lives of our people. From our own experience we know what the Bible can mean for the personal life."

May we each find its value for ourselves.

For Better Sabbath Schools in 1952

ERIC B. HARE

Where there is little thinking, there is little learning;
Where there is more thinking, there is more learning;
Where there is most thinking, there is most learning.

In most of our institutes we were able to demonstrate the fact that the question method of teaching produces the most thinking and results in the most learning, and is therefore the best method of teaching.

The Need of Small Sabbath School Classes

The question method makes it necessary to have small classes of from eight to twenty members in order that the responses, and the thoughts expressed, and the points discussed can be heard by all. In the history of our Sabbath school work, we have found a church here and there, where because of the increase of church membership, they have found it almost impossible to break up into classes. They have therefore taught the whole Sabbath school as one large class. Invariably we find that after a quarter or two everybody is tired of it, and is anxious to get back to small classes, because they find that the large class encourages lazy habits of study, and usually degenerates into a short preaching service, to say nothing of the talent that is going to waste and is not being developed. Do you know what we advise when the Sabbath school is too crowded to divide up into small classes?

Build a New Church

Yes, that's it, build a new church, or better still "swarm" and build another church. We can point with delight to many a new church that has been born this way. Sometimes a group will start a branch Sabbath school. It will grow and grow till it becomes a church organization of its own.

Increasing Your Attendance

You just can't keep bees away from flowers and blossoms, because that's where they get what they want—honey. Similarly, where definite plans are made to feed the flock of God in the Sabbath school, attendance at Sabbath school is no longer a problem. Therefore if you wish to increase your attendance at Sabbath school in 1952, simply increase your teacher-ability and your problem is solved.

The Teachers' Training Course

Since 1936 we have been working on a comprehensive Sabbath school teachers' training course. We developed three courses, in which we used about nine text-books. But there was much duplicated instruction in these courses, and often the text-books were written for Sunday school teachers, and did not fit the needs of Sabbath school teachers; and more and more as we held these training courses, we heard the cry, "Why can't we have our own text-books, written for Seventh-day Adventists, by Seventh-day Adventists?" So in 1946 the book "Teaching Teachers to Teach" was born, and has since become the most popular training course the Sabbath School Department has ever produced. Each chapter is preceded by three or four pages of quotations from the books of the Spirit of prophecy. To each lesson is added a chapter review, and an examination qualifies a teacher for a worthwhile diploma.

This is the way to conduct a training course for your Sabbath school:—

1. Obtain enough text-books so each teacher can read and study. One text-book is sufficient for a man and his wife.

2. Write to your conference Sabbath School secretary, and ask for as many bundles of "review sheets" as you have teachers taking the course. Also ask for an attendance page on which to keep the records, and a teacher's guide which gives the leader the correct answers to the review sheet questions. These supplies are free.

3. Then study the book chapter by chapter, filling in the review sheets. You can meet once a week for twelve weeks or two or three times a week for six weeks or a month.

4. When all the twelve chapters are studied and all of the review sheets filled in, write to your conference Sabbath School secretary and ask for as many examination papers as you have teachers sitting for the examination. Your conference Sabbath School secretary will also send a "key" giving the answers for the leader. After the examination the leader marks the papers, and sends the names and the marks of those who received above seventy per cent to the conference Sabbath School secretary.

5. In a few days back will come the beautiful diplomas.

I have seen many, many groups take this training course. Its result is always the same. It inspires, it trains, it qualifies. It gives the teacher a satisfaction that in many cases he has never tasted before.

Elect Your Officers for a Year

There are still some Sabbath schools that are being crippled by having new superintendents and secretaries elected every six months. Nearly all Sabbath school officers realize that during their first quarter of office their work is somewhat experimental. Their second quarter of service is not only easier for them, but counts more for the Sabbath school. Similarly, the third and fourth quarters produce still more satisfaction for both officers and Sabbath school.

If some seem reluctant to accept office for a whole year, it is usually because they realize that their time may be broken, and they do not want to be tied down, if emergencies arise. The electing of an assistant superintendent or secretary, or two assistants, if the Sabbath school is quite large, will usually ease the burden, and provide for any emergencies or breaks that might come in the period of service.

Very frequently the assistant superintendent or secretary after serving a year as assistant is elected during the following year as superintendent or secretary, and thus the period of experimenting is eliminated and greater satisfaction insured.

So if you would like to have a better Sabbath school in 1952 try having small classes, conducting a teachers' training course, and electing your officers for the whole year.

Medical Work in North Nigeria

DR. J. A. HYDE
Medical Director, S.D.A. Mission Medical Unit, Jengre

North Nigeria is the largest field of the West African Union, if one takes geography and population as the criterion. It stretches about 750 miles from east to west, and 350 miles from north to south. Its population is variously estimated as being from eight to eleven million, of which just under half is Moslem, and the rest mainly animist in religion. Unfortunately, ninety-five per cent of the area

Sermons We See

EDGAR A. GUEST

I'd rather see a sermon than hear one any day;
I'd rather one should walk with me than merely tell the way.
The eye's a better pupil and more willing than the ear,
Fine counsel is confusing, but example's always clear;
And the best of all the preachers are the men who live their creeds,
For to see good put in action is what everybody needs.

I soon can learn to do it if you'll let me see it done;
I can watch your hands in action, but your tongue too fast may run,
And the lecture you deliver may be very wise and true,
But I'd rather get my lessons by observing what you do;
For I might misunderstand you, and the high advice you give,
But there's no misunderstanding how you act and how you live.

When I see a deed of kindness, I am eager to be kind,
When a weaker brother stumbles and a strong man stays behind
Just to see if he can help him, then the wish grows strong in me
To become as big and thoughtful as I know that friend to be.
And all travellers can witness that the best of guides today
Is not the one who tells them, but the one who shows the way.

One good man teaches many, men believe what they behold;
One deed of kindness noticed is worth forty that are told,
Who stands with men of honour learns to hold his honour dear,
For right living speaks a language which to everyone is clear.
Though an able speaker charms me with his eloquence, I say:
I'd rather SEE a sermon than HEAR one, any day.

is under Moslem rulership, with resulting undemocratic rules so far as mission work is concerned. In this whole area we have but one overseas family and eight native evangelists. Due to the Moslem rulers, it is very difficult for Christian missionaries from overseas to expand their work. In many places it is impossible to carry out a preaching appointment without the permission of the Emir, who is also the leader of the Moslem religion and endorsed by the British Resident.

There is one opening, however, which the Christian missions may use, and that is the medical work. We have for many years been teaching that the medical work is the "opening wedge"; but to realize the full truth of this phrase one has to work in an area where the government is committed to maintaining the status quo as far as religion is concerned. In North Nigeria, the small medical unit at Jengre, run for a long time by my graduate nurse mother, has given a good start to the work, and from the converts obtained at this time have come some first-class evangelistic material, that is being used to enter areas where overseas missionaries may not go.

Now it has been decided that medical work should be developed in a strong way, and exploration of the possibilities of a hospital at Jengre have been carried out. "Exploration" is the right word. From the beginning we have been working under such difficult conditions as might turn the hair of the surgeon, in the homeland, grey overnight. Round huts have been our wards, grass mats our beds, wooden tables have been used for operating, my own saucepans have been our sterilizers; yes, and even, at the start, a safety razor blade has been our scalpel at operations! Still, the same good Lord that overrules in the well-equipped hospitals in the homeland, controls the destinies of His servants on the unequipped frontiers.

How has this medical work affected the progress of the soul-saving work in this area? Well, we can point to at least three new companies of believers raised up as a direct result of the medical work. Besides this the general evangelistic work has received a tremendous stimulus from the medical work. We now are well known over a hundred miles radius, which continues to extend from day to day, and this makes the initial contact much easier for our evangelists. In the nine months, from September, 1950, to June, 1951, our baptized membership has gone up twelve per cent, the baptismal class membership fifteen per cent, the Sabbath school membership thirty-two per cent, and the hearer's class, which consists solely of new converts, has increased by 134 per cent. North Nigeria is truly on the march for God.

And what of the future? As you give, and Adventists do not need to be told to give generously, you will know that the money so carefully saved and hardly won, will go into building up a hospital which will attract to itself many who would otherwise be forbidden the gospel by government decree. How many of these will accept the gospel we cannot say, but we pledge ourselves to use the funds you send us so that all who come within our reach will be given the good news and asked to prepare for Jesus' coming.

Missionary Expedition Among Cannibals

A. J. CAMPBELL
Kainantu, New Guinea

An astonished person recently exclaimed to the writer: "I didn't know there were any more cannibals left in the world. It seems incredible!" And it doubtless does.

It would be interesting to know when humanity first reached the state of depravity where it commenced to eat of its own kind. History records that under circumstances of famine this took place during the siege of Jerusalem by Titus the Roman general, in A.D. 70. Columbus, the famed discoverer of the Americas, mentioned in a report sent to their Spanish majesties, that cannibalism was practised in the West Indies. The letter was dated October, 1498.

Leo, with his wife and family. Leo is one of the faithful teachers in the cannibal territory of New Guinea.

During the latter part of last year, the president of the Coral Sea Union Mission, Pastor White, and Pastor Gathercole of the Victorian Conference, the writer with his twin sons, some native teachers, and a carrier line of fifty, made up a missionary expedition into the primitive country lying south-west of Kainantu. We planned to reach the Moke area, which lies four days' walk out in the mountainous regions of the Purari's vast headwater system.

This very interesting though gruelling trip was prefaced by two short day trips made by jeep. The first carried us into the Keketuantu Valley, where sixty-five candidates were baptized several months previously. We stopped before a large crowd of natives who had gathered to take part in a feast made in honour of a child born the previous day. The inhabitants of this large village are attached to either the Adventist or another mission. Among several ways of knowing who are the adherents of the respective missions, is by what they eat or do not eat.

It was noted that a section of the people had added dozens of rats to their menu. Some had already been roasted over fires, others were waiting their turn, while photographers became very interested in recording the process of cooking and eating the same. Later a service was held for our people and visitors in the Keketuantu church.

The second short trip was made to our Omaura intermediate school, which is located eighteen miles south-east of Kainantu toward the Markham Valley. Here Brother and Sister Gane have a heavy programme of teaching and industrial training on hand. We met Brother Gane with his jeep and trailer at the Government Agricultural Experimental Station at Aiyura, to which he had delivered a load of timber. The two jeeps then travelled on to Omaura together. We had to return to Kainantu the same day, so our stay was perforce brief. All were much impressed by the very practical and successful teaching work accomplished by Sister Gane and her native assistants, with the use of aids. In the application of this intensely practical system surely lies one of Central New Guinea's greatest educational needs, the influence of which must spread far and wide.

Next morning our jeep party set out for the Avani mission station, cared for by Sam and his wife. It is a pretty place, where we have an organized church, by the main road between Kainantu and Bena Bena. Here our vehicle was placed in its shed to await the return of our tired bodies after we had negotiated the ranges of mountains to the south. A well-attended meeting was cared for by our visitors that afternoon, and pictures were shown during the evening. The ordinances were also held.

The following morning the assault on the rugged country to the south began in earnest, as we climbed nearly three thousand feet from the floor of the Komperina valley, over the range into the next and higher Sunofira valley which from that approach, is the door to the cannibal country. Brother Eric Gane with some Omaura teachers and students, after a long cross-country walk, joined us for the week-end. In a large building constructed for this occasion. Pastors White and Gathercole conducted several much appreciated meetings, which were attended by about 1,500 people.

Sabbath morning an inspiring service was held, when forty-nine candidates were buried with their Lord in baptism. About three thousand in all witnessed this service. It was conducted in a beautiful pool from a mountain stream, limestone flanked; and among the multitude of onlookers were twelve cannibals, who trustingly followed their teacher through country completely strange to them. This baptism took place at the portals to the country in which they live. We know that its influence will react with good effect upon the inhabitants of their land, as they in turn are told of what was witnessed by fellow tribesmen trustful enough to leave their own areas.

Next morning our cannibal friends accompanied us on their return journey, for we were bound for their land. The mountains surrounding Sunofira are pierced by many large limestone caves, most of which are unexplored. Some of us penetrated one of these caves for one hundred yards, and with its stalagmites and stalactites it reminded us of visits to Jenolan Caves. We turned back, but some of the boys continued on, emerging into a small valley much further on. Streams run through most of these caves, and it is not long since the local people used them as hiding-places from their enemies, concealing their families, pigs, food, and firewood, whilst a good water supply was always at hand.

That we were entering the gates of the cannibal area of the south-west was indelibly impressed upon us one morning as our attention was called to two human skulls placed opposite each other on either side of the jungle trail. Victims of cannibalism, we were told.

We had thought to make an extra special effort to arrive at Moke that Sunday evening; but it was well we did not try, for it took us five strenuous hours to reach there the following morning. Instead we stayed at Andru's new mission, and held meetings with the natives of Ofafina. Next morning a group of natives standing at the entrance to another valley stopped us and urged that we send them a teacher. This has since been done, and his report just to hand is a very encouraging one.

In company with our twelve "hawk-eyed cannibals," as one of our party aptly called them, we arrived at Moke at three o'clock in the afternoon. We made camp in a well-constructed house kiap (government patrol post), which is the government's most forward base. From this position may be witnessed some of central New Guinea's most magnificent scenery. We have since established a mission outpost in this locality, and three others farther on, all among cannibals. Unfortunately we did not have time to visit the cannibalistic Fore country, where we have eight outposts. Several of these advanced mission outposts are cared for by baptized lay natives. This in turn is having a very good reaction in their home villages here in the Kainantu district.

If we were to visit Aranke's mission at Miarasa, it would be necessary to drop down nearly 2,000 feet, and return the same evening. Although hearts wavered a little, it was decided to make the journey. Our misgiving was not due to the fear of being eaten but to the fact that it had been a very strenuous day, and it was late to attempt another stage of the journey.

This is the cannibal country, where the people not only consume any stray enemy unfortunate enough to fall into their hands, but where they also eat all their own dead. At least that was the practice until very recently; but in a remarkably short time the gospel is turning the tide, and we believe it will not be long before many of these people will be following their newly found Lord in better living and in baptism.

Aranke and his helper teachers are doing a noble work among these cannibal people. It was there, when a government party was seeking the grave of a murdered man, that they were informed by the village representatives, "There is no grave, we have eaten the man according to our custom; our mouths are our graves." It was over the range, in unentered country, that Aranke prayed for a man who was so ill he had been left to die. Returning later our worker was surprised to find this man alive and well. He begged Aranke to remain as a missionary to his people, adding, "If you had not prayed for me and helped me then, I would have died and been eaten by my people, according to our custom."

Near his new mission at Miarasa, Aranke took some of our party to see a double grave, representing two of the first five graves to be located in this area. Armed warriors at the time of interment surrounded the open graves threateningly. Attempts were made to prevent the bodies from being buried, in order that they might be eaten. The majority of the people had been won over in a wonderful way by the power of God, and they supported their teacher. Thus began a big step upwards from the pit of this revolting type of cannibalism (if any comparisons could be allowed in connection with this terrible custom).

The corpse is first washed in the blood of a pig, then cut up by the people in the village "square," after which it is steam-cooked in bamboo sections, along with the flesh of the same animal. Though those graves were signs of the conquering hand of death, they were far more than that: they were also evidence of wonderful victories of the gospel message manifested

New Zealand Missionary College Graduation

DR. E. G. McDOWELL, Principal

The week of November 10-18 was a busy and exciting one at the New Zealand Missionary College. The first three days were devoted to examinations which, for some, were conducted under difficulties. A serious influenza epidemic had confined many students to bed for several days, and several wrote their papers in bed. Fortunately all were convalescent by the time of graduation.

When the long-awaited Friday evening arrived, the social hall was well filled with visitors and students to hear Pastor J. B. Conley, secretary of the Ministerial Association, address the graduates. He took as his text Esther 4: 14, "And who knoweth whether thou art come to the kingdom for such a time as this?" Pastor Conley outlined the tragic condition of the world, and pointed the graduates to the need of the hour. He urged them to fulfil their aim, "To know Christ and to make Him known." The male choir, under the leadership of Mr. Darrel Wyborn, rendered an item.

The Sabbath service was conducted by Pastor G. Ratcliffe of New Plymouth. He chose as his theme the graduates' motto, "Persevere unto Perfection," and clearly delineated the path that the Christian must follow. Dr. Josephine Furness sang "Take My Life."

In the afternoon a Missionary Volunteer Investiture service was conducted by Pastor J. Howse, M.V. secretary of the South New Zealand Conference. A large group of young people, who had studied during the year under the direction of Miss F. Whisker, were invested. Following this function, four students, Gwenneth Hoare, Jeanie Rakuraku, Joan Riley, and David Tucker, were baptized by Pastor Ratcliffe. Pastor Howse gave the address.

On Saturday evening the college choir, under the leadership of Mr. H. J. Heath, delighted a large audience with a most enjoyable rendering of the cantata, "The Good Shepherd." The soloists were May Spowart, Laurel Smith, H. D. Devine, and H. J. Heath.

The social hall, tastefully decorated by the graduates, presented a pleasant scene on Sunday afternoon when, accompanied by the faculty and visiting ministers, the graduates assembled on the platform. The graduation address was given by Pastor V. W. Stotesbury of Dunedin. His deeply moving appeal to heed the cry of humanity left an indelible impression on both graduates and audience. By special request, the male choir rendered another item. Noel Williamson recited the class poem, and following the presentation of diplomas by the principal, the class president, Donald Moodie, made the class presentation, a large sign erected at the road entrance to the college.

Intermediate Ministerial: Robert Dixon, John Gray, Lindsay Harman, Donald Moodie, Noel Williamson, Michael Wilson.

Intermediate Normal: Averill Brooker, Elaine Pierard, Ruth Rippingale, John Gray, Noel Williamson.

Bible Instructor: Joy Griffin, May Spowart.

Business: Beverley Atkins, Fay Thomass, Jansen Greenfield.

Building Construction: Terence Puckey, Ronald White.

Twelve Thousand Miles to Find the Truth!

C. T. PARKINSON

"Can you tell me which day is the Sabbath? Is Saturday the right day? Where can I find a church that worships on this day?" Such were the questions put to the writer, as he stood at the book table in the Palmerston North Mission tent, after D. K. Down had delivered his Friday night address, "Why Does God Allow War, Suffering, and Death?" Who was this lady inquiring earnestly in a rich Irish brogue about the Sabbath question? The subject had not yet been presented.

Let me tell you the story as she told it to me.

"In 1932 I married, and went to live near Belfast in Northern Ireland. Amongst the books in my husband's library was one called 'Our Day,' which I decided to read. 'How strange,' I said to my husband, 'this book says Saturday is the Sabbath, and it gives its proof from Scripture!' My husband was plainly not interested. I was; but whilst living in Northern Ireland I never came in contact with people who kept the Sabbath.

"In 1950 my husband and I, with our family, decided to migrate to New Zealand. We left on the liner "Rangitane," and during the voyage the boat stopped at Pitcairn Island. It was Saturday. We expected to buy fruit; but instead, on board came the islanders giving out papers to the passengers—mission papers. I took some of these, and read them during the voyage. 'Strange,' I mused, 'these teach the same things as the book in my husband's library.' Too late then to make further inquiries.

"In February, 1950, the "Rangitane" docked at Wellington, and we moved into the rich farming district of the Manawatu, of which Palmerston North is the chief city. In April, 1951, Mr. Down commenced his evangelistic campaign in the city of Palmerston North. I noticed that the city was placarded with window-cards—that the newspapers carried advertisements, that trailers were parked near busy intersections, and each carried the title of your opening meeting. It was impossible to move about the city without meeting the title, "Dead Men Do Tell Tales." I was interested, and came to the opening meeting. What did I hear! yes, similar things to what I had read in the book in Ireland, and the missionary papers from the Pitcairn Islanders. Surely these must be the people I searched for in Belfast who keep Saturday as the Sabbath.

"Nothing could keep me from attending the meetings that followed, and I found them interesting, and that for which I had been seeking. I am convinced that Saturday is the Sabbath, and I am determined, by the grace of God, to keep it faithfully."

Today this lady is a baptized member of the Palmerston North church. Praise be to God for the faithful colporteur, and the missionary activities of the Pitcairn Islanders who sowed the seed for the mission team to reap.

Jubilee Camp-Cum-Congress

MRS. E. E. WHITE

"Is that MB 2331? Is it possible to book a cabin on the S.S. "Taroona" on December 24?"

"No? How about the 22nd or 23rd?"

"Sorry, sir, there are no bookings near that date."

This was the invariable reply to those who had not made early reservations, and who ultimately had to fly over the Tasman to attend the great congress held at South Arm near Hobart.

Two hundred and fifty young people, the greatest number of Adventist youth ever gathered together in the Trans-Commonwealth Union, met for a week of inspiration and fellowship twenty miles south of Tasmania's lovely capital city of Hobart, from Christmas eve to New Year's eve. They came from Victoria, South Australia, South New South Wales, West Australia and, of course, Tasmania; moreover, America, England, India, and New Guinea were also represented there. We have attended many youth camps in different parts of the world; but we felt that a special spirit of earnestness pervaded this group of young people. Surely the Lord is working on the hearts of the youth in every part of the world to arise and shine, and to share their faith.

The camp site was ideally situated overlooking the estuary of the Derwent, and our hosts and hostesses, Pastor and Mrs. Hollingsworth and Pastor and Mrs. L. H. Hay, certainly extended a very friendly welcome to the youth and their leaders, making us all feel that we were at home away from home.

We would not forget the excellent cooks and their male helpers who provided such appetizing and satisfying meals: for example, the wonderful Sabbath dessert from Brother Stanton's orchard, or the never failing jugs of fruit juice from Brother Brown's farm. The flowers sent by local church members which adorned the dining-tables also testified to the wonderful beauty and productiveness of Tasmania's heart-shaped garden isle.

Pastor and Mrs. A. P. Dyason, the much loved leaders of the Trans-Commonwealth

Union Young People's Department, were the ideal mother and father at South Arm in caring for all the youth and the many problems of accommodation, and it was a real thrill to see Pastor Dyason's father, Pastor A. J. Dyason, who has worked for the youth of Australia and New Zealand for many years. The young people were happy to meet him, and the home churches will know the "Sweet Songs" which this veteran composed specially for the youth camp. Such words as—

"Arise! O youth! take the sacred Book and study its pages through,
And show each day as you move along you are led by the power of God.
Arise! O youth! tell a dying world that Christ is the living Word:
Then know your faith,
And live your faith,
And share your faith,
Arise! O youth arise!"

to a stirring, challenging tune will not soon be forgotten.

Many visitors were welcomed at this camp-cum-congress. Old friends and new were happy to welcome Pastor and Mrs. Cormack, who are on holiday in their homeland, and Pastor Cormack's messages and the friendliness of both were a valuable contribution to the congress spirit. The inimitable Pastor Eric Hare inspired us with mission stories, and also gave practical guidance to the young men and women in their social life and problems. It was a pleasure to welcome these three visitors from Washington, D.C. Pastor E. E. White represented the Education and M.V. Departments of the Inter-Union Conference, and challenged the youth to arise and share their faith. Pastor L. C. Naden, also from the Inter-Union Conference, spent a few days with us, and was very happy as usual among the young people, and we were glad that he stayed longer than was scheduled.

The mission field was also represented at the opening service on Wednesday evening when Pastor Boehm walked in, accompanied by Masive, and a thrill seemed to pass through the congregation as this dark-skinned convert from heathenism entered the hall.

The Sabbath school mission appeal arranged by these two brethren was very impressive. Suddenly the door opened, and Masive ran on to the platform with a war cry, brandishing his spears. Then in his own language he made his appeal for a teacher; but each European missionary had to refuse this earnest request because of a lack of funds. Evidently the message was very eloquent, for the Sabbath school offering exceeded £40 and the combined Sabbath offerings from the campers amounted to over £100 that day.

After this stirring and soul-searching appeal from the highlands of New Guinea, we understood why many of the young people in the congregation desired to go "over and help" them and have the joy of winning many others such as Masive into this last-day message.

Pastor Naden was the speaker at the divine service, and was surely used of God to inspire the young people to give themselves whole-heartedly to the closing stages of the great controversy between good and evil. After an altar call the aisles were full of earnest young people who desired to forsake worldly allurements, and to surrender all to the great Master Guide. There must have been great rejoicing in heaven at the consecration made by young and old at South Arm.

After lunch the hall filled and overflowed to hear what was designed to be a model young people's meeting. The youth themselves took part and featured the Morning Watch, Share-your-faith activities, and our world-wide missionary programme.

It was a pleasure to have two visitors from Avondale in the persons of Professor and Mrs. Greer, who delighted all by their friendliness. On Saturday evening Professor Greer screened some pictures of Avondale and of Carmel, the sister institution in the West, and past and present students of these two colleges gave commentaries on the educational and spiritual activities carried out in the respective institutions.

The workshops were a daily feature of the campers, and three groups were arranged so that the young people could attend all the workshops. Pastor C. D. Judd taught us how to give Bible studies. Pastor Hollingsworth showed how to gain entry into a home in his "Operation Doorbell" and Pastor E. E. White conducted the third workshop on "Personal Evangelism," showing how to develop interests with casual and daily contacts.

The forums, conducted daily, were as usual of great interest to all, and many questions sent in to the brains trust were an evidence of the desire of youth to put away those things that defile, and to find the way of truth. One new aspect was a forum conducted wholly by ladies, and which dealt fully with questions that seem to be ever with us, and upon which mere men are unable or unwilling to advise!

The spiritual side of the congress was maintained by early morning prayer bands in the quietness of the dormitories, and by the evening meetings during which each conference presented a picture of youth activity in its respective territory. These were full of ideas which were eagerly noted, and will be carried out in a larger sphere of influence as a result. A number of excellent films were shown, setting a standard of entertainment which our youth need to understand today. Recreation of a re-creating nature were the trips to Port Arthur, site of a previous prison settlement, and to the top of Mount Wellington on a cold and windy day.

This congress had been planned for a whole year, and much effort had been exercised by many workers over a considerable period. We believe that all this toil was worth while, for the youth departed refreshed and strengthened with higher ideals and deeper devotion, and eager to spend their talents in service for the Master.

Pastor W. M. R. Scragg, the president of the South New South Wales Conference, requests us to insert the following:—

"Pastor H. Mitchell, who is now eighty-five years of age, is in the Public Hospital, Temora, N.S.W. He has been a hard-working minister in this cause. Any reader who is an old friend of his would be cheering a faithful soldier of the cross over the last deep, lonely ditch, if he would write him a line of sympathy and courage."

A. G. STEWART

In laying to rest in the Northern Suburbs cemetery, Sydney, our beloved brother, William Robert Carswell, who fell asleep on Thursday evening, January 24, we were conscious that in his passing another link with the early history of our work in New Zealand and Australia had been broken.

William Robert Carswell was born in Wellington, New Zealand, May 17, 1863, and was therefore within a few months of his eighty-ninth birthday. While still a child his parents moved to the Hawkes Bay district, where his father took up the occupation of sheep farming. William Carswell's first earnings were made by picking up the fleeces of wool at shearing time when he was but a boy seven years of age.

He later went out on to the hillsides with the men mustering the flocks, and subsequently went into partnership in sheep farming with his cousin. Evidently of a devout nature and studious habits, our late brother discovered that there was no scriptural authority for the change of the Sabbath, and so in 1892, in his twenty-ninth year, he commenced the observance of the true Sabbath and united with the Adventist Church. For the following two years he was a student in our first Bible school in Australasia, conducted on St. Kilda Road, Melbourne.

When the Avondale estate was purchased at Dora Creek, he was among the first group of students to commence upon its industrial programme, by living in the old hostel at Cooranbong, crossing over on "the dry log," clearing the college campus, and erecting buildings. At that time he became acquainted with Janet McCulloch Hamilton, who had been working in Sister E. G. White's home, and their subsequent marriage was conducted by the late W. C. White. It was the first Adventist wedding in that area, and was celebrated fifty-five years ago.

The late Sister Hamilton Carswell was a widow when they were married; her only surviving daughter, Nettie, is Mrs. Joseph Mills of Wahroonga. To her and other relatives we extend our deepest sympathy.

Brother and Sister Carswell pioneered the Bible work in the Newcastle district, where the Hamilton church was subsequently built and organized. Brother Carswell was an invited guest to its fiftieth anniversary, two or three years ago.

In several states of the Commonwealth and New Zealand these consecrated workers gave most faithful service. In New Zealand, Brother Carswell did considerable translating of the message into the Maori language.

Since making Wahroonga their home, more than a quarter of a century ago, Brother Carswell has distributed quantities of literature, and has consistently engaged in the Appeal for Missions. For some time he was Bible instructor of the trainees of the Sydney Sanitarium. He was always a keen Bible student, and his versatile pen wrote a deal of encouraging and comforting poetry. Well may we say in the words of the prophet, "Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like his."

WEDDING BELLS

MILLS-GRAHAM.—In the evening of January 2, 1952, Miss Dorothy Graham walked down the aisle of the Perth church to be joined in holy matrimony to Mr. Noel Mills. While these young people made their vows, their many friends silently prayed God's richest blessing upon their united Christian lives.

R. H. Powrie.

JUST-KING.—On December 27, 1951, at the Haden church many friends witnessed the exchanging of marital vows by Elva, daughter of Brother and Sister W. King of Haden, Queensland, and Ralph Just, a recent convert to the message. As this happy and consecrated couple set up their home in Toowoomba we wish them God's abundant blessings. B. C. Grosser.

HANKINSON-SPARKE.—On the afternoon of January 16, 1952, the Inverell church, N.S.W., was filled with relatives and friends of Allan David Hankinson and Enid Colleen Sparke, who came to pledge their troth each to the other. As this young couple launch out on the sea of life together, we wish them a safe and happy voyage, and the continued blessing of God. C. H. Raphael.

UNTIL THE DAY BREAK

DINGLE.—At the age of seventy-nine, we laid to rest in the Maryborough cemetery, Queensland, Jessie Gertrude Dingle. She accepted the message fifty years ago, and remained true to her God right to the end. To the sorrowing loved ones, words of comfort and hope were spoken, and they were pointed to the certainty of the resurrection morning. D. Young.

SCHRAPEL.—Jessie Elizabeth Schrapel, beloved wife of Mr. Jack Schrapel, passed away suddenly at the Base Hospital, Mildura, on December 18, 1951, at the age of fifty-seven. The members of the Mildura church mourn the loss of this faithful sister, and extend to the sorrowing husband and relatives their deep and sincere sympathy. We laid her to rest in the family grave at the Footscray cemetery, Melbourne. H. Baird.

EDWARDS.—On January 9, 1952, at Geraldton, West Australia, we laid Sister Laura Edwards to rest. She has been a very faithful member of the Bookara church for many years. For a long time she has cared for her aged husband, Brother Edward J. Edwards. We extend our sincere sympathy to sorrowing relatives. We know that Sister Edwards will be greatly missed, but we do not sorrow as those who have no hope.

D. A. Speck.

BAILEY.—On December 27, 1951 at the Base hospital, Mildura, Victoria, Brother Raymond Ray Bailey passed quietly to his rest at the age of twenty-two years. Ray was a faithful member of the Dareton church and was held in high esteem not only by the members, but by all in the neighbourhood. Pastor Hooper spoke words of comfort and hope to the friends and relatives gathered in the church, and we laid him to rest in the Mildura cemetery to await the call of the Life-giver.

H. Baird.

ARCHER.—After a brief illness, Sister Mabel M. I. Archer passed away, and we laid her to rest in the Karrakatta cemetery, West Australia, on December 15, 1951. Mrs. Archer heard and accepted the advent message recently at the Uttley-Hammond mission in Perth, and became a member of the church in that city. We extend our sympathy to the family, especially because the following day her husband was injured in an accident, remained unconscious for three days, then he too passed away. D. A. Speck.

WALKER.—Annie Walker was born July 17, 1866, and departed this life, January 31, 1952, at Wahroonga, N.S.W. Sister Walker came to Australia at the age of twenty-one, and devoted her life to educational work. With her sister, Mrs. G. Chapman, who had brought to her a knowledge of present truth, she was baptized at Ashfield, 1894. After attending the Avondale summer school she devoted the remainder of her active life to church school work. Her many years of self-sacrificing work will certainly be rewarded. To her bereaved relatives we extend our sympathies. Pastor C. S. Palmer assisted at the funeral services.

A. G. Stewart.

RODIER.—A shocked and grief-stricken district was fully and sympathetically represented on January 30 in the Warburton church and later at the Wesburn cemetery as we laid to rest little nine-year-old Lynette Rodier. Lynette had been standing on the running-board of her uncle's truck, when the brakes failed and she was thrown off as it rolled across uneven ground. A wheel passed over her, and life was almost instantly extinguished. In life Lynette was a benediction and a constant happy example of what Christ taught when He gathered the children about Him. In death this thought continues to lead her parents and those who cared for her to love and serve Jesus. We are confident that in the resurrection Lynette will rejoice in meeting these loved ones again. The grace that is sufficient in sorrow will also keep and seal consecrated decision until that final day of redemption. R. Pavitt Brown.

BRICE.—On December 27, 1951, the life of our faithful Sister Ada Brice came suddenly to an end after a brief illness. We laid her to rest in the Fremantle cemetery, West Australia, in the sure hope of the blessed resurrection. Faithfully did she witness for God, and great will be her reward. The mourning relatives were directed to the God of all comfort.

R. H. Powrie.

HARDWICKE.—George Augustus Hardwicke was born in Auburn, N.S.W. He graduated in medicine from the Sydney university in 1925. The same year he was united in marriage to Dorothy Elwyn While, a graduate nurse of the Sydney Sanitarium. To them were born two children, Kenneth George and Noeline Joan. Dr. Hardwicke died suddenly on January 28, at the age of fifty-one and leaves to mourn his passing, his mother, his wife and two children, his daughter-in-law, and his grandson. To them we extend our sincere sympathy in this hour of their deep sorrow. Pastor H. G. Moulds assisted the writer at the church and graveside.

Reuben E. Hare.

BREVITIES

In response to a call from the North New Zealand Conference, Brother R. W. Edwards of the Book and Bible House, Newcastle, has now connected with the same line of work in the Auckland office.

Among the passengers arriving by seaplane from Fiji on Sunday, February 3, who were interviewed by the press as eyewitnesses of the devastation wrought by the recent hurricane in Fiji, were Pastor J. E. Cormack, president of the Cook Islands Mission, who was returning to Sydney to continue his furlough, and Misses Betty and Jeniffer Adrian, who are on their way to the Australasian Missionary College for further training. Their escape from accident during such an experience reveals the hand of a kind Providence.

It is with very sincere regret that we record the passing from this life of Brother W. H. Bagnall of Beecroft, New South Wales. Brother Bagnall was widely known and highly respected. He served for many years as church elder and on the local conference committee. With the organization of the Inter-Union Conference he was elected a member of that committee, and also a member of the Australasian Missionary College board. To his sorrowing widow and family we extend our sincere sympathy in their loss, and remind them of the happy reunion awaiting them with the return of the Saviour, whom Brother Bagnall loved and so faithfully served.

To fill the vacancy caused by the transfer of Brother R. W. Edwards to New Zealand, Brother Winston Fletcher, who has recently been attending the A.M. College, has now been appointed to take charge of the work in the Book and Bible House, Newcastle. We trust that this important branch of the work will continue to expand under the blessing of God.

Having experienced the hazards of the recent severe hurricane in Fiji, where he spent a few days, Pastor Paul Wickman, secretary of the Radio Department of the General Conference, arrived in Sydney on January 30, accompanied by Pastor F. A. Mote, who had been attending the half-yearly meeting of the Central Pacific Union Mission committee. Pastor Wickman is on an extended visit to this Division, primarily in the interests of our world-wide radio work, and brings a most encouraging report of its progress in several other Divisions of the world field.

During the forenoon of Thursday, January 31, 1952, Sister Annie Walker, retired church school teacher and sister to Mrs. G. Chapman of Wahroonga, passed to her rest in her eighty-sixth year. At the turn of the century Sister Walker pioneered our church school work in the Newcastle area, where she hired a miner's hut and set up her school. On a very meagre allowance she nobly continued, and some of her first pupils are respected workers in the cause today. Sister Walker taught in five or six other church schools in this state until her failing sense of hearing forced her to retire. She, however, did quite a deal of visiting and literature distribution even in her retirement. Her niece, Sister Dorothy Chapman, with much devotion, cared for her aunt in her declining years.

through a Christian native of the central highlands of New Guinea.

These cannibals have a great respect for Aranke and his associates, who have built neat mission stations among them, having gone out in full faith of God's power to change hearts. We were shown a tiny round house with a larger one of similar design a few yards removed. One night, a few weeks earlier, the first-mentioned house contained the body of a woman and the other the body of a man, both awaiting burial. Some of the natives were determined that this should not take place, and that the two bodies would be eaten according to custom. During the night flesh was taken from the legs of the dead woman and eaten, but that she should be buried at all represented a great victory.

One Sabbath the man mentioned was noticed to be missing from his seat in the little building used as a church. That day in inter-tribal action the man had killed an enemy, and in turn his own body was pierced with arrows. Prior to his death he begged that he be not carried back to his village to die, for he was ashamed to see the face of Aranke for, as he said, he had "killed a man, and broken the Sabbath." In but a few short weeks his conscience had been aroused to that remarkable extent!

At the burial his relatives and friends—as did the dead woman's—demanded that the body be released to be eaten. It was a double victory that day, and wonderful changes are now taking place among those people. The forces of evil lost another battle to the God of heaven, who through His Son had initiated the gospel of peace and salvation. Both bodies were buried at the same time, after a most exciting time for Aranke, but a grave-side service was successfully held. A fence was placed around the grave, and sticks of sugar-cane were left to mark the actual division of the graves.

Setting forth next morning we headed for Tarumu, which lay in the direction of South Chimbu, and we thought of the Gilmores and their workers out there. For the first time we could see between mighty ranges to the lowlands of the Middle Purari. Leo, with his wife and children, accompanied us for a short distance, then branched off into another section of cannibal country, where they have established their new station. We admired the spirit of that father and mother as they smilingly left us, taking their children back to their home among the cannibals, the lone representatives of any mission.

We were shown the place where a Flying Fortress crashed in flames in 1943 with the loss of twelve lives. An Australian army officer and some of our teachers happened to be walking through to Port Moresby, which took them a month. Twelve unidentified bodies were buried, but eleven only were located at a later date. After eight years we photographed an old cannibal still wearing the cap of one of the pilots—sad reminder of a great tragedy! Near by a Mitchell bomber crashed; but the crew of three parachuted to safety. They were not molested by the natives, whom they warned not to touch the unexploded bombs. They later did so, and some of the cannibals lost their lives in the explosion that resulted.

It was a particularly tired line of seventy travellers that reached Kemiu that night, some with blistered feet. For some time Kemiu had been our farthest outpost, but it is more in the middle of our field of operations today. Good meetings were held there, where we now have some baptized members.

The following morning we pressed on to Tirokavi, where teacher Kura, of Mussau, is located. There we have a flourishing mission in a pretty and fertile area. Some of our party visited several dark groves hidden away in the jungle. One held as its secret a raised platform on which were twenty skulls and other human bones. In another grove was seen a small raised house in which was the decomposing body of a small child. The people here do not eat their own dead as do the Fore and Moke tribes. They do, however, disinter bodies some time after burial, and eat portions of the remains for the "strength" to be obtained. After this the remains are placed on drying racks hidden in the jungle.

Each day represented hard travelling over very rough country, where it seemed impossible to find a level stretch even for a quarter of a mile. "Pushers" and "pullers" helped some of our party up and down steep mountains, of which there seemed to be no end.

The final morning of our eight-day trip we crossed a ten-thousand-foot range, then dropped down thousands of feet, back into the Komperina valley to Avani, and to our jeep, which was a real friend in need. Two hours after leaving Avani we were back home at Kainantu, and we were glad to know that the gospel message was penetrating quickly through the country which we had visited, and beyond. Many of those cannibals of today will be baptized Christians of tomorrow, by the grace of God, and through the love of His Son.

The presence with us of Pastors H. White and Gathercole, and for part of the time Brother Gane, was much appreciated. Much appreciated, too, by hundreds of people who crowded into our school building, were the two film evenings made possible by Pastor White's bringing his 16 mm. movie projector with him. The din and excitement at times were impossible to control, for practically none of these people had seen "picture walk about along canvas" before!

We ask for your continued prayers for the great areas of central New Guinea, that the message may quickly reach its "uttermost parts."

"Anyone who lets his tongue go into the wholesale business will soon drive his mind into bankruptcy."
