Come Unto Me

"Come unto Me"—
  Blest invitation kind.
I come to Thee,
  And leave the world behind.

Bring what it may,
  This year untried,
I look to Thee to-day
  To be my guide.

Not for another day
  Not yet begun;
But I would daily pray,
  "Thy will be done."

Dear Lord, my life to Thee
  I gladly give,
Who gave so much for me,
  That I might live.

My life is not enough,
  Though given free,
To repay half the love
  Thou gavest me.

Address Given by Pastor A. G. Daniells in the Oakland Church, Sabbath, October 14, 1911

Part Two

LUTHER did not have this threefold message of Revelation 14. He had the Bible, and he had a real message for the world. It took hold of the hearts of men. It did the work God purposed it should; but it was not the third angel's message of Revelation 14. No preacher of the gospel from Noah to 1844 understood the third angel's message. No preacher ever preached that message. No other generation ever heard it nor had anything to do with it. The Scriptures clearly show that at the termination of the 2,300 years, in 1844, the hour would come for the third angel's message to be fully launched, and the precision that marks the movement of the heavenly bodies marked the events connected with it. My brethren, there is just as much certainty and accuracy and precision in the work of God in carrying out His purposes as there is in the movements of the worlds He has created and put in space and keeps there. The very year when the third angel's message of Revelation 14 was due, it began to sound. It was here, and it has been here ever since, doing its work.

This message, that took hold of your lives and brought you here, is to warn the world of the coming of the Lord, and to prepare the people to be saved in His kingdom. It is that message that shows how to prepare for the coming of Christ: "Here are they that keep the commandments of God, and the faith of Jesus." You have had many temptations, many trials, perhaps many doubts at times; but somehow you haven't felt you could break from it; have you?

Where is this message doing its work? Where was it to be preached? —"To every nation, kindred, tongue, and people." It sets before us the greatest evangelical movement the world has ever seen. The people who have this message, must get out of every native country and go abroad. Not only so, but they must go everywhere, when they start in with that work. There will be something about the movement and the people that will urge them on, push them on, impel them forward, everywhere, until the light is shining to all people in all lands, so that the earth itself will be lightened with the glory of God from that message.

When we get a full view of the marvellous progress this threefold message has already made in the world, it seems to me it must lay hold of us and impress us with the fact that surely God is closing His work among men.

A recent report gotten out by the Rev. A. T. Pierson, late editor of the Missionary Review of the World, and published in that magazine, tabulates statistics regarding the missionary movement of the nineteenth century. We all know that this last century has witnessed the greatest movement in behalf of foreign missions in heathen nations that the world has ever seen. The number of people out preaching the gospel of Christ to the heathen to-day is greater than ever before. There are more native believers among all the heathen nations who have found Christ, and who are rejoicing in His salvation, than have ever lived among these people in any one generation before. It is marvellous what has been done since William Carey pressed his hard way out to a foreign field.

This report gives the names of sixty-two mission boards, date of their organizations, number of fields entered, etc. For example: The great American Board of Foreign Missions was organized in 1810—101 years ago—and has been at work ever since, and is to-day carrying on its work in ten different countries,—South Africa, Turkey, India, China, Japan, Micronesia, Mexico, Spain, Austria, Philippines.

Seventh-day Adventists began foreign mission operations in 1874—sixty-four years later than this American Board of Foreign Missions—and are operating in all the countries where the American Board is found, and thirty-seven more. That Board, with its millions of representatives and its untold wealth, in one hundred years has pressed its way into ten foreign fields. Seventh-day Adventists, coming along sixty-four years later in their foreign operations, with but few people, and very small resources, have gone right out into the field, entered all that the American Board has, and gone into thirty-seven lands beyond.

The Presbyterian Board, one of the strongest in the country, is operating in India, Siam, China, Japan, Korea, West Africa, Syria, Persia, Spanish America, and the Philippines. We are in all these except Siam, and we have one believer there, and our Burmese mission is right on the edge.

The Methodists have entered China, Korea, Japan, India, Turkey, Bulgaria, Mexico, South America, and the Philippines.

This report gives names of fifty-seven divisions of the great world mission field. That is the entire number. The American Board is in ten, the Presbyterians are in ten, the Methodist Board is in nine.

The Seventh-day Adventist denomination is not included in this report. I found the Seventh-day Baptist; date of their organization in 1842. They have entered one foreign country, and have an annual income of twelve thousand dollars. They have three missionaries abroad. I wondered why we were not put in that report. I have attached it to the bottom, after having Brother Rogers, our statistician, go over every division and count them up.

We are in forty-seven of the fifty-seven divisions. There are ten countries we are in that these other boards are not operating in at all. There are fifty-seven fields of mission territory that we are working in, the same number as all the rest put together are working in.

I have no disposition to boast, or feel proud, but I will tell you it brought home to my mind a very definite impression that during the century God has been opening the whole world for the preaching of the gospel. Such men as Carey, Judson, Livingstone, and Moffat have gone out into these fields to prepare the way. God has had consecrated missionaries all over this world from these religious bodies, led them out, and stationed them in every country of the world.

God has raised up a people with this message, and said to them, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." They have gone out; and what has He done?—He has led them forth as no other religious body in the world has been led forth. He has planted them in almost every land that any other body of people is working in, and led them on to victories in other lands besides.

What does this mean, dear friends? Go back in history. Our Seventh-day Baptist friends were well started, had more wealth, and were on the ground, and were leading out in their lines of work, when we just began. How is it that this people has come up, not only with this cross of the Sabbath truth, but the cross in the teaching of life only in Christ, the spirit of prophecy, tithing, and the health reform? This message is loaded down with these things that bring self-denial to the human heart.

We have often been counselled: "If you would go out and preach the prophecies and the coming of the Lord, and leave off the Sabbath, what wonderful progress you would make!" The Seventh-day Baptists said, "If you would only go and herald the Sabbath truth, and leave off the visions, how well you would get on!" So all about us people have wanted to cut off things that brought cross to the human heart, shear it down so that there would be as little hardship as possible, that we might be free from these things, so that our work would sail ahead.

With all the self-denial, with all the crosses, this cause has taken wings, and has gone as no other religious movement in this generation has gone in the world. The records are before us; the facts are here. It is accounted for in just one way: here is a message that God has ordained shall go to every nation, kindred, tongue and people, in this generation, and it is going. That is the only way to account for it.

Brethren, we never could have gone out into the lands we have without the superintending providence and help of a divine being. Is it not remarkable that our dear friends, our brethren and sisters, our sons and our daughters, our people everywhere, have gone, gone, and gone, into the world, and you will find them everywhere standing by the message and telling it to their fellow-men?

When I was over with Brother Boettcher in Russia this summer, travelling from town to town, and stopping every night with some new church in Russia, the thought of the growth of the work almost staggered me. I said to him: "I have always thought of Russia as a far-away foreign field. But here I am stopping every night with our own beloved people—Seventh-day Adventists." Then we took our map, and studying from east to west, north to south, found that in journeying around the world, stops could be made almost every night with Seventh-day Adventist families.

We do not realize what is being done in these countries. My heart has been out there, but I can not keep up with the marvellous progress of this work. I stood in amazement in Russia at the mighty work of God. At St. Petersburg I found two churches, and preached to them; next night in Riga, where there are 400 believers. Three years ago there were fifty believers there. While I was there we had to have two meetings—one for the Russians, and one for the Lettonians; and the hall was crowded at both. These are Seventh-day Adventists—just like you. This message talks the same language the world over. It says precisely the same thing, and it touches the same responsive chord in every heart. It changes people; it gives the same kind of heart; it gives them the same hope; it gives them the same current of thought. It has its every thought travelling in the same direction. And they are the same the world over.

These people were touched as I told them how we were willing to send our best brethren there to help them; had done so in sparing Brother Boettcher. At the close one arose and addressed the interpreter, proposing that a message of thanks and brotherly greetings be sent to the believers in America. A vote was taken, and all enthusiastically and solemnly took part in a rising response to the suggestion. We could not keep the tears from rolling. Brother Boettcher felt that he ought to call all the people to take a stand for God, to consecrate themselves anew. Everybody arose. Some had not before taken their stand. Twelve of these stood up to be baptized, among them a talented young woman who had become interested. She took her stand notwithstanding the opposition, and the possible imprisonment for leaving the Greek Church. Notwithstanding the terrible restrictions in Russia, our ministers baptized 750 Seventh-day Adventist converts the last year. They are coming in spite of everything.

Our brethren are working on in Russia; and as I went to St. Petersburg, Riga, Moscow, finding preachers and believers everywhere, just as it is here, I said, "What is this great thing that God has done?" I can not make you sense it, brethren. Nobody can fully realize the tremendous facts with which we stand face to face until he goes out there among those people.

When I went into Turkey, there I met our ministers, our believers, —Turks, Armenians, and Greeks.

In Austria, where the law is the most restrictive and bitter, I found many of our people. We can not hold a single religious meeting in Austria. Only lectures, or meetings, of a social improvement nature are allowed, and our work there is carried on under the registered name of "The More Light Society." The leader can not be a minister; he must be simply a man among men. Thank God for men. I found the hall where the More Light Society meetings are held, nicely filled, and I was introduced to them as a friend from America. I told them about the progress of the third angel's message, and we had a wonderful meeting. They have to baptize in the night, between ten and two o'clock. Knowing that it is absolutely impossible to reach the people in their homes, as this is carefully guarded by the police, I inquired of our brother who has charge of the work there, how he got at those interested to give them the real instruction in the truth. He told me his work is largely done in the restaurants. In Vienna it is the custom to buy your lunch or dinner, and then if you like you may occupy a portion of the place fitted up for visiting and resting. There are fine easy upholstered chairs, the latest magazines and papers, the porter on hand to care for your wants. After one who attends the meeting in the hall shows an interest, and says he would like to study further, the brother makes an appointment with him to meet in some restaurant, where they have a little lunch together, then spend time in studying. Many of the new converts are gained in this way.

[Here Elder Daniells returned to incidents connected with his experiences in Russia, telling of the terrible prejudice, the stringent laws, and how 10,000 priests watch their work day and night. He told of his visit to the prison where is imprisoned one of our ministers. He closed with an exhortation to faithfulness of all in their relation to the message, and asked all to arise who would consecrate themselves and what they have to the work anew. The congregation in a body arose.]

The True Missionary Spirit

He whose heart overflows with love and sympathy will always find abundant resources for exercising the true missionary spirit. The means of doing good and of scattering happiness are so plentiful and so varied that those who find pleasure in them will of necessity be busy, happy workers for the Master.

The human mind is ever busy, feeding either upon what is wholesome or what is poisonous; working out results for good or for evil. To fill the mind with true ideas, to inspire it with vital energy, to discipline it to pure, original work is worth a thousand efforts to extract the weeds which will surely flourish there if left undisciplined.

Truth is stronger than any network of error, however complex may be its weaving, and sooner or later the reality will make itself manifest. God's Word is the only true educator, it has stood the test of ages, and will stand throughout eternity. Whatever is good, true, and pure is durable, while evil has within it the seeds of decay. God in His great love and mercy has ordained that all evil shall sometime have an end, but if our actions are of a high and noble character they will never die.

There is nothing that can have such a powerful effect upon social, domestic, and individual welfare as the widespread diffusion of the spirit of truth. It underlies all honest and faithful work. Brethren and sisters, now is the time to work. Gird on the armour; test every thought and action by the Word of God. We cannot all go to the front of the battle, but we can all help those who can go. The year 1911 has closed; can we all say, "I have done my best." If we could, then our tithes and offerings would flow in so that there would be no dearth of men and means in the mission fields. Day after day our span of time is shortened. Let us utilize every moment to the honour and glory of God.

Mrs. P. Gooding.

Go and Tell Them

"Over and over the cry is heard,
'Come and bring us the saving Word.'
Over and over the message rings
From the loving lips of the King of kings,
'Go and tell them—'tis My command—
Go and tell them in every land.'
And while one soul of the sons of men
Waits for the Word from the lips or pen,
We who have heard it must tell it again."

Tahiti

For some time there have been elements in the work here that have prevented progressive steps being taken with the message of present truth. Certain actions were taken at our late council meeting at Raiatea, when Brother Gates was with us, to place the work of God in these islands on a higher plane. The direct result of this action was the severing from our ranks of several of the old members. There are some in every land who like the associations of our people, and like to be identified with the denomination, but have no mind to forsake the evil things of the world, and to accept the cross of Christ. At certain stages in the work these meet with trial and disappointment, and consequently drop out of the message. It is some of this class who have at this time chosen a way of their own, and walk no more with us.

It is pleasing to note, however, both at Raiatea and Tahiti, our meetings of late have been greatly blessed of God. Some of our members who have been using tobacco, pork, and coffee have put these things away, and are walking in the light with renewed experiences.

Last Sabbath we held a baptismal service, when a young man of good reputation in the village of Arue went forward in the solemn ordinance. He had often been invited in the past to be baptized and join the church, but he had no desire to go forward; but as soon as these reform changes were made in our church, he left all to follow Christ.

We believe others will come in and fill up the places of those who have dropped out.

We are living in solemn times. God is in earnest with His people, and desires us all to forsake every evil way and prepare for the closing scenes of this world and for the kingdom of glory.

Pray for us, brethren and sisters, that we may be successful in reaching many of the natives of these islands with the message of present truth.

A Worker's Institute, Fiji

THE recommendation passed in the late Union Conference Council to hold a ministerial institute once a year in each conference, brought to a realization our plans for a workers' institute in this field. The time appointed for this meeting was December 8 to 15, and as the Buresala School was having its vacation at this time, the school building afforded a very convenient place for the institute, and also gave opportunity for the students who remained at school to attend the evening and Sabbath services.

Twelve out of the fifteen native workers and five of the Europeans were able to attend and assist in this meeting. We are sorry that owing to failing health, Pauliasi could not be with us. In apologizing for his absence he said that he was getting too old to learn now and that he feared it might only be time wasted. He says that many times he prepares certain subjects to present in the services, but before he can present them they go from him. He feels he must soon lay down the burdens he has so long and energetically borne as a preacher of the gospel.

Having never held a meeting of this kind before in Fiji, we felt somewhat concerned as to how to make the best use of the time spent together.

We, however, drew up the following programme, which afforded ample material, with sufficent variety to make it very helpful and interesting:

Sunday — Preaching, Discussion led by Joni Lui.
Bible Readings, Discussion led by Macusela.
Treating the Sick, Discussion led by Alipati Rainima.

Monday — Distribution of Literature, Discussion led by Moapi Dau.
Reporting (Workers, Missionary and Quarterly Meetings) Discussion led by Miss Williams.

Tuesday— Sabbath-school Work (Paper) Discussion led by Mrs. Stewart.
Report Blanks, Discussion led by Miss Williams.
Reading and Writing, Discussion led by Finiase.

Wednesday—Music and Singing, Discussion led by Mrs. Marriott.
Canvassing Work, Discussion led by Bro. Driver and Alipati.

Thursday— Time and How to Use It, Discussion led by A. G. Stewart.
Our Diet, Discussion led by Timoci Nawara.
Our Manners, Discussion led by Enele Ma'afu.

Each evening studies were held on such subjects as Church Organization, Duties of Ministers, Elders, Deacons, and other Officers, and Right Conduct in the House of God. A very free, interesting, yet quiet discussion followed the different subjects presented, and one could not but note with what clearness these native teachers marked the different points of interest.

Each Sabbath proved to be a blessed day to us all, when time and opportunity were given for testimonies and confession of faults. The Spirit of the Lord had much freedom and did its appointed work in removing the little things that hinder its working upon our hearts. Some said they wished the meetings might continue for several weeks instead of but one.

One who has been a long time in the field said he wished to return to school again that he might learn more thoroughly how to do the work of the Master. It brings to one's mind the words of the disciples when upon the mount of transfiguration, they said, "Lord, it is good for us to be here, let us make here three tabernacles."

We realized that we were being prayed for during this meeting, and we trust that the results will be seen in more and better work in the future, and many souls saved for eternity.

Savaii, Samoa

DURING the past few months I have had the privilege of visiting and labouring on this the largest of the islands of the Samoan group. Previously, as far as I can learn, nothing has been done by our people on this island in the way of missionary work, excepting the selling of a few copies of "Christ Our Saviour" by Brother Lake some years ago. Dr. Braucht and the late Sister Sarah Young also made a visit to the island, but it was more with the idea of doing medical work than engaging in missionary labours. I had the pleasure of distributing papers and tracts, and of giving talks, readings, and also of correcting some bad impressions people had of us as a denomination. Savaii, as above stated, is the largest of these islands, and measures about fifty miles long by about thirty miles broad. It is not the most beautiful of the islands by any means, but gives one the impression of being cooler than the one on which Apia is situated, and on which Brother and Sister Howse live. This no doubt is due to its getting more of the trade winds than Apia.

It is on Savaii that the real Samoan is spoken. On the other islands it is more of a dialect or a corruption of the true language. There is no difference in the way of expressing things, but where they use a "t" on Savaii, on the other islands they use a "k;" for instance, the word for man in the real Samoan is tagata, but on all of these islands it is pronounced as though written with a "k," thus: kagaka. This makes quite a difference in the talking of the language.

While on Savaii, I took a native boy; that is, what is called a boy, but who really was a man of mature years, and we went almost half round the island with papers, returning again to our starting point about a week later. From there, after having spent a number of weeks practically alone, as I had no one of like precious faith with whom to meet and spend Sabbath, I decided to return to Apia. Here we arrived in due time after a fairly good passage of about twelve hours.

After spending a good and refreshing week, I again set out for Sava ii laden with papers and tracts. In all I had with me almost one thousand papers and tracts on each of the doctrines that we as a people hold as the truth. Also I had about one hundred of the Samoan paper, the Tula Moni. This paper is pronounced as being sili lava, (exceedingly good), and is everywhere received with open arms, as it were. There is one fault that every one finds in it, and that is that it is too small. "Could it not be doubled?" they ask.

Wherever I went I was mistaken for a Mormon, and the first thing I heard was the name "Mormon" called out after me. I would stop and tell them I was not a Mormon, and then sit down with the people and tell them of our truth. They had never before heard of our church, and were surprised to find a church that kept Saturday as the Sabbath. Many of the old men told me that Samoa used to keep Sabbath before, but the Government changed it to fit in with the steamers! I asked them if the Government had any right to change God's day, and they didn't think it had. But they are too self-righteous, too self-satisfied. They do not feel the need of our message.

On my return the second time from Apia to Savaii, I landed at a place about sixty miles away from the place where I had previously left my things, and decided to walk clear round the island, and so get back to my box of clothes and things that way. Getting another native boy, we set out at 5 a.m. on a Thursday. We had to carry green cocoanuts to drink along the way, as we had a large lava field to cross. We walked all morning and until 1 : 30 p.m., before we came to a town, and then we were just about ready for a rest and something to eat, as we had been walking across this bare lava field with no shelter from the sweltering sun. During the remainder of the tour we crossed three other lava fields, though none of them were as large as this one.

On Sunday it began to rain, and continued so to do right through to the end of the trip. This necessitated our being wet most of the time, but there was one good thing, and that was that it kept us fairly cool.

The worst was to come, at least, for me. The boy not being able to keep up, I walked ahead, and coming to a stream, asked a native standing on the opposite bank whether it was deep or not. He told me it was about up to my waist. I waded in, but he must have mistaken my waist, for it reached my arm-pits, and was rushing as only mountain streams swelled by recent rains can rush. Well, I let go my boots and everything I was carrying, and just struck out, and after quite an exciting battle, got ashore. Afterwards I learned that many a man has lost his life in that same way, in that river, and that very few men ever return to tell the tale, who go down there. It makes me feel grateful to the Lord for sparing my life, unworthy though it be.

From this place I had the joy, for we are told to call it joy, of walking barefooted to my destination. It was a walk, too. The road was a mass of rough lava stones, and by the time I got to the place to which I was going, I was tired out. The following morning my feet were so badly swollen that I could not get another pair of boots on, but two days in bed cured that, and I am thankful to say I have had nothing worse come of it. After resting for two or three days, I left for Apia, and very glad I was to get back among friends once more.

The Lord truly helps His people, and I feel like praising His name for His kind protecting care over me during my trip. Pray for the silent witnesses for truth that have been scattered throughout this island, that some sheaves may be the result of this seed-sowing. We never can know the amount of good that these papers can do until, on that morning when the sower and reaper together are rewarded alike, we shall have our reward given us for what we have done towards it. L. A. BUTLER.

Barambah Aboriginal Settlement

IN company with Pastor Cady, and after a pleasant ride from Brisbane, we arrived safely at Murgon, where we were met by Brethren Cooper and Horwood, the former taking us to his hospitable home.

The next day Brother Cooper drove us to the Barambah Settlement, and introduced us to Mr. Lipscombe, the Protector, who personally showed us over the most interesting parts of the institution.

We were first shown the day-school, where between eighty and ninety children were being instructed by their teacher, Miss Lipscombe. We were agreeably surprised to find that the work done in the school was fully equal, and in some features, superior, to what we have seen in many State schools of similar grades, which speaks well for the intelligence of the scholars, and the excellence of the instruction imparted by their teacher. The writing of some of these little ones shown us on this visit was almost equal to copper-plate, and the stitches of some of the pieces of sewing were so exceedingly regular and accurately lined, that it took close examination on our part to overcome the first impression that it was machined in part.

Next we were shown the boys' domicile. In this cottage are housed all the orphan boys, and others who are, for the best of reasons, separated from their parents: the latter having sometimes to go quite a distance to work, remaining away weeks or even months. The girls also have a cottage to themselves, and like the boys, have a kind and motherly woman of their own nationality placed over them, and all are under the kindly supervision of Mrs. Lipscombe, who is well liked by all, and evidently makes an excellent matron.

The next interesting place was the soup kitchen. Here again we found a kindly "mother" presiding over the culinary matters, and after inspecting the bread and other things cooked and cooking, we were satisfied that all was being done in this line to the very best advantage. In both the boys' and girls' dormitories, as well as in this department, the bread-baking was really good.

There is a good store, where supplies of all necessaries are obtainable; and nurse's quarters, where medical treatment and help are given.

A new building which is intended for a hospital is just about completed; everything about the structure being worked and placed in position by the natives, under the able management of the Protector, who seems to have a good general knowledge of all the things that such an one should know.

There are about six hundred men, women, and children on the station when all are in, but it is rarely that happens, as sometimes nearly two hundred would be out, some at work, and for other reasons.

Most of the aboriginals, with their families, live on the ridges near the main buildings of the Settlement, in small structures not unlike those of their ancestors, while others have more pretentious buildings, and some degree of comfort is possible.

The Settlement is, as far as land goes, an excellent place for the natives. It contains about seven thousand acres, and forms a happy hunting ground for them in their leisure time.

One thing is especially noticeable; as soon as the natives are free from their work outside the Settlement, they make a bee-line for "home," which seems to speak well for the kindly treatment meted out to them there. Some of the aboriginals are civilized, and some are fairly well educated for them, but the great majority are semi-barbarous, and all need much help.

"Those Tent Meetings" — No. 3

Searching the Scriptures

"The crooked shall be made straight, and the rough places plain." Isa. 40 : 4.

Every evening something different,
  And presented in a way
As to leave no doubt about it.
  For we saw, as plain as day,
One by one those fatal errors,
  Which have got so firm a hold
On the hearts and minds of people,
  Like a scroll right there unrolled.

If we had but read our Bibles,
  We had found it as he said—
Of the living good, translated,
  And the righteous, sleeping dead
Joining hands in shining pageant
  When the King of kings appears,
To ascend with Him to glory,
  There to reign a thousand years.

After which, the Holy City
  Shall descend from God on high,
Where no ill shall ever enter,
  Where is heard no moan or sigh,
But the gladsome, joyful chorus
  Which the ransomed then shall sing,
Where fond lips, long silent, greet them,
  And where Christ shall reign as King.

Every night, just after meeting,
  Neighbours stopped to speak a word,
And to search neglected Bibles;—
  'Twas the only theme we heard.
One declared the proof was plenty
  That the Saviour changed the day,
But, of course, what verse or chapter,
  Couldn't just exactly say.

—M. B. DUFFIE.

A Retrospect

LAST June two of our pioneer missionaries were taking orders for a health work in and around Wedderburn, Victoria.

While doing so they lodged at the house of an elderly woman who was at that time a member of the Church of Christ. A young married woman who belonged to the Roman Catholic Church was also staying there, and as our brethren engaged in worship in their room from day to day, the two women became somewhat curious to know to what denomination such pious young men belonged.

Questions were asked from time to time, which led to a series of Bible studies, by which those two were convinced that the teachings of Seventh-day Adventists were founded on scripture.

A few others showed some interest, and the Conference Committee decided to send the writers there to develop the interest. We spent about four months in that district, holding studies, visiting, and circulating literature, and were pleased to be able to leave four persons there (two previously of the Roman Catholic faith), as light-bearers.

Others were convinced of the truth, and were thinking seriously over the matter when we left.

After leaving Wedderburn, we stayed at Bendigo a short time to assist our brethren there in circulating literature dealing with the subject of the Bible in State schools. The work proved enjoyable, but we regret that more time could not have been spent on it before the election took place. While this work was going on a social gathering was held in the church one evening, at which our young people rendered suitable items. Near the close of it the elder brought forward a Bible in Braille type, obtained from the British and Foreign Bible Society, London, and in a few interesting and fitting remarks presented the same on behalf of the church to their blind Brother and Sister Hedley. Brother Hedley responded by stating that ever since he reached manhood, and indeed even while a boy, he had longed to possess such a Bible, but had never been able to procure one.

It was touching indeed to witness as well as to hear the manifestations of gratitude and delight on the part of these two dear souls. Although the total weight of the volumes is about four hundredweight, he assured them that he would gladly make room for it in his home and make as many trips as were necessary to convey it.

The next Sabbath those present at missionary meeting must have felt amply repaid for their effort to procure the book when Brother Hedley clearly and fluently read aloud a chapter from the Book of Acts.

We are now on our way to Tonga, and take this opportunity of thanking our brethren and sisters for the kindness extended to us during our labours in the home fields, and ask that your prayers may follow us in our new work.

Farewell to the Old School Year at Warburton

ON the evening of December 21, a large gathering of relatives and friends assembled in the school-room of the church building at Warburton, to witness the annual "break-up" of the church-school. The hall was nicely decorated with ferns and flowers, and an arch, also decorated with ferns, and bearing the word "Welcome" in large letters, was placed upon the platform. Behind this arch, seated on forms, were the children; and the white dresses, socks, and shoes of the girls, contrasted with the dark trousers, white shirts, and red sashes and ties of the boys, had a very bright and pleasing effect.

The programme was long, but interesting in every detail, and each child performed his part with promptitude and exactness; thus testifying very fully to the careful and diligent training he had received.

Among the items rendered was a temperance dialogue. Four children —three girls and a boy—were seated around the table. One little girl with her sewing very ably represented the mother, while the others were evidently just returned from school, and very eager to tell their mother about a temperance lecture which they had listened to that afternoon. The lecturer would indeed have felt honoured could he have heard the accurate account which these children gave of his lecture, to say nothing of the determination expressed by each that he would never touch alcohol, even if it were in the form of sweets, soft drinks, etc. The little mother, with her wise counsel, very ably assisted her children in making this decision.

Another item of especial interest was the missionary offering to Java. It is customary in this school to reward the children with money for marks earned during the year; and instead of spending their money on themselves, these children decided to give it all to Java. A very prettily made basket was suspended from the centre of the arch, and three children, dressed in real native Javanese costume took their stand around it. The roll was then called, and each child responded by coming forward and dropping her gift into the basket. Each gift was enclosed in a little silk bag made by the parents for the occasion. It stirred our hearts to witness this unselfishness manifested by the children; and we pray that the Lord will richly bless these gifts, and that many precious souls from heathen Java will hear and accept the message of salvation.

During the evening, a very nice umbrella was presented to Mrs. Faulkhead by Brother Anderson, as a token of love and esteem from the girls in the school; and at the close of the programme, Brother Faulkhead had the pleasure of presenting gifts to four willing helpers, who had given their time to assist in training the children for the evening's performance. These gifts were a token of appreciation from the children. Their happy faces, as the gifts were presented, were worth seeing.

Altogether a very enjoyable and profitable evening was spent, notwithstanding the stormy weather; and all joined heartily in the vote of thanks and appreciation which was accorded to Mrs. Faulkhead and her assistants for the efforts which they had made to make the evening a success. It might be interesting to note that a number of the children attending the school are from the township of Warburton; and their parents have expressed pleasure at the interest which is shown in them, and also for the instruction which they receive from the Word of God. As a result, one little girl has decided to obey the Lord, and is now keeping the Sabbath, although she stands alone in the family. Let us pray much for our church-schools, that children attending, who do not know the truth, may understand and obey it, for has not the Saviour said, "Suffer little children to come unto Me, . . . for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

The singing of the doxology brought the evening's proceedings to a close; and all went home feeling that it had indeed been good to be there.

A Farewell

THE evening of December 13 was the occasion of a pleasant social gathering of the sanitarium family at Papanui, Christchurch, New Zealand, to tender a farewell to Brother and Sister Carrick. The time was spent in singing and reciting, followed by the presentation of a gift as a token of the esteem in which their work was held. These dear workers have been with the work here almost from its beginning, sharing in its joys and its sorrows, its successes and its disappointments, and have always been loyal to the cause which they love. They intend to spend a few days visiting their parents before leaving for Australia, where they are to connect with the work at the Sydney Sanitarium. They have the good wishes and prayers of the entire family of workers here that the blessing of the Lord may attend them in their new field of labour.

Should We Eat Fish?

FOR many years we have both read and listened to the wise counsel given us concerning the care of our bodies. Among the most prominent of those principles are those concerning our diet. We are all agreed that the flesh of animals diseased as we know it to be—is not fit for human consumption. It is safe to say that this form of flesh food is almost wholly discarded by us as a people; but does this make us what we claim to be—vegetarians?

Frequently I have conversed with people who, apparently, would not entertain the idea of eating meat, but who, when offered some poultry or fish do not refuse. To make the situation look as inconsistent and ridiculous as it really is, I have asked the question, "Is fowl or fish a vegetable product?" Many reason that they dispense with the flesh of animals on account of disease, but, they say, fish is perfectly free from all maladies.

About two years ago my deceased wife, who was then very ill, fancied some fish. With one ambition to satisfy any such craving, I started out to get the best that was obtainable. Arriving at the fish curing establishment and seeing tons of fish ready to be sold, I made my mission known to the man in charge, who happened to be a friend. To my surprise he said, "I have'nt one for you." "But," I said, "what are these here?" Calling me by name, he said candidly that he would not eat them. I thanked him, and felt truly grateful for friendly protection.

Having my suspicions aroused in this way, I began to ask questions. "Do you ever find disease in the fish?" was my first query. "Oh yes," he said. "What is the disease?" "Cancer." "What do you do with such fish?" "Cut out the affected part, (?)" he said, "and cure them in the usual way."

After hearing such things I have never felt it a hard matter to produce arguments potent enough to make even the thought of eating fish become nauseating.

Obituary

KRINGLE.—Leslie James was the youngest son of Brother and Sister Kringle, of Gray, St. Marys, Tasmania. He was a thoughtful, kindly-disposed boy, and much loved of the family—he was the baby of a large family; but cruel death called for Leslie by the agency of the dreaded disease, diphtheria, at the age of ten years and three months. He died at 11:30 on Sabbath morning, December 23rd., and was laid to rest in his last earthly resting-place, in the St. Marys Cemetery, on Monday, Christmas Day, December 25. Words of comfort were spoken at the home and at the graveside by the writer. THOS. H. CRADDOCK.

IF you have any faith give me a share of it! Your doubts you may keep to yourself for I have plenty of my own.—Goethe.

SISTER Eva Edwards left Sydney on January 5 by the Cooma for Queensland, where she goes to take charge of the Murgon church-school.

A SITE for the New Zealand camp has been found at Surrey Hills, Grey Lynn, Auckland, between Firth and Campbell streets. The meeting opens on January 30.

---

THE Young People's Rally held on New Year's Day at Burwood, New South Wales, proved a very enjoyable occasion. A report of this will appear next week.

---

IF any of our readers have a copy of "Healthful Living" that they can spare for one of our workers, please write to the New South Wales Conference office, stating the price asked for the same.

---

BROTHER W. R. CARSWELL, who for some years has been connected with the Maori work of New Zealand, has recently joined Sister Carswell at Wahroonga, to receive the benefit of much-needed rest.

ON Christmas day the Avondale College family enjoyed a very pleasant outing at Lake Macquarie, going down the Dora Creek in the college launches. The day was ideal for such a gathering, and altogether it was a very pleasant occasion for those who have remained at Avondale during the vacation, all of whom are working hard to keep up the industrial branches of the work and in getting things in readiness for another school year.

BROTHER AND SISTER A. CARRICK arrived in Sydney from New Zealand on December 26. Brother Carrick has had a wide experience in nursing in connection with our sanitarium in Christchurch, New Zealand, and now connects with the Sydney Sanitarium as superintendent of the gentlemen's bathrooms. See New Zealand's farewell to Brother and Sister Carrick on previous page. A hearty welcome is extended to these workers on this side of the water, and we trust their future labours will be blessed even to a greater extent than in the past.

WE are informed that Brother and Sister R. K. Piper sailed from Wellington, New Zealand, on the S. S. Tahiti, December 15, for the Cook Islands, the field to which they were appointed by the Union Conference at the last council. Paster Cady was on this boat, bound for the Society Islands, and thus accompanied them to their destination. Brother and Sister Sterling, working alone in the Cook group, have pleaded earnestly for reinforcements, and not only they but all will rejoice that the work at that mission station is now being strengthened by these additional labourers.

---

BROTHER HAROLD E. CARR and Sister Clara Patterson, both graduate nurses of the Sydney Sanitarium, were united in marriage at Wahroonga by Pastor Fulton on Tuesday afternoon, January 2. Brother and Sister Carr are under appointment to the New Hebrides, and expect to leave for their field of labour in a few weeks' time. In the meantime they are making a visit to Brother Carr's mother at Warburton, Victoria. Earnest prayers and hearty good wishes will attend Brother and Sister Carr to to their distant and untried field.

---

FROM a letter received at our Union Conference office, we learn that Pastor Munson and family arrived in Melbourne from Java on December 31, and that they are due in Sydney about January 7. Brother Munson writes that Sister Munson improved much on the voyage, gaining both weight and strength. All will be glad to hear this. Let us continue to remember Sister Munson in prayer, that she may be raised up, as on previous occasions, to continue in service for the Master. We understand that they will remain for at least a few weeks in Sydney, but cannot say definitely as to just what their future movements will be until they arrive here.

PASTOR W. H. Pascoe of New Zealand writes:

"At Wellington we have the usual services on Sabbath and two public meetings during the week. We are much cheered and encouraged by the interest manifested. One gentleman, the steward of a boat, long interested in the truth has now taken a definite stand to obey God. Another gentleman, a Government employee, has also decided to serve the Lord, and is anxiously awaiting the arrival from Auckland of the official in charge of his department to ascertain whether he can retain his present employment. Others are deeply stirred, and our hope is strong that before another month elapses we shall have the joy of seeing some take a firm stand with the remnant people of God. The Lord is working, and His power is mighty to save. We know that He can and will cut this work short in righteousness, and soon if faithful we shall join in the glad 'harvest home.'"

Change in the Date of the South Australian Camp-meeting

AT a recent meeting of the Conference Committee it was decided to postpone the time of the annual camp-meeting. The meeting therefore will be held from April 2 to 14, in Unley. We trust that the weather will be pleasanter at this time than it usually is in February. The later date will also give us more time in which to conduct our tent missions, two of which will be in progress in the vicinity of Adelaide, beginning in January. We trust that all our members will note the change of date, and will arrange to attend the camp-meeting, April 2 to 14. MORRIS LUKENS.
