SACRED PRAYER.

I need not leave the busy world,
Or wait till daily tasks are o'er,
To fold my hands in sacred prayer
Behind the close-shut closet door.

There is a wide and viewless room,
As high as heaven, as fair as day,
Where, though my feet may join the throng,
My soul may enter in and pray.

When I have banished wayward thoughts,
Of sinful works the fruitful seed,
When folly wins my ears no more,
The closet door is shut indeed.

No human step approaching breaks
The blissful silence of the place,
No shadow steals across the light
That falls from my Redeemer's face.

And never through these crystal walls
The clash of light can pierce its way,
Nor ever can a human ear
Drink in the spirit words I say.

One hearkening even cannot know
When I have passed the threshold door,
For He alone who hears my prayer
Has heard the shutting of the door

Living in the Tropics.

It has now been over fourteen years since we first came to the Society Islands to labor. Until that time we had always lived in a temperate climate, where the winters were very cold, and the summers short; for we were born, and had spent most of our lives, in Wisconsin, in the United States of America. We have summer all the year round here in the islands; but though the sun is very hot, the sea-breezes help to cool the atmosphere, and the heat is not so oppressive as in some other places. Yet if some cold is needed to "brace one up," as we often hear, we do not get it here. We have usually kept in good health, and believe that a reasonable regard of the laws of health, which are also nature's laws, is what has enabled us to keep as well as we have.

We have never had the idea that the foods which are grown in the islands, were not so wholesome as those of temperate climes; but on the contrary, we consider them to be just the food best adapted for this climate, with the addition of bread, which to those who have always had it, seems indispensable. Our diet is composed principally of yam, taro, breadfruit, sweet potatoes, bananas, mummy apples, mangoes, oranges, the cocoanut, rice, and bread. We have some other fruits and vegetables occasionally which are more rare, and also use some legumes. At times when we have been compelled by circumstances to use much imported foods, we have not enjoyed as good health as when we were living mostly on the native foods. I would say that we do not make a practice of eating the ripe cocoanut meat, though we often eat the soft meat of the green nuts, which is quite digestible and wholesome. The ripe nuts are used mostly in cooking; and though they are very useful for that, it is not good to make a practice of eating the meat as it is; and to eat it between meals is particularly bad. When the meat is grated, and washed with a little water, the liquid from it is strained, and makes a very good substitute for milk and cream to use in cooking. We can make this very rich, or dilute it considerably with water, just as is needed. We use it for shortening and for flavoring soups, stews, puddings, etc., also for a sauce, and for almost everything for which milk and cream are used, and we think it very wholesome. It is rich in fat, and so furnishes all of that element that is needed in the system.

Our systems do not require so much food in a warm climate as where it is cold; for when it is cold, more food must be burned in the body to keep us warm; and when we come to a hot climate, if we do not cut down our rations, we are more liable to feel weak and feverish, and be troubled with colds and other unpleasant symptoms.

We find that in a hot climate frequent bathing is very essential to health and comfort. We always take a full cold water bath one or more times each day, if we are where we can have access to the water, and it is usually plentiful here. One who is in the habit of taking cold baths right along, is not liable to be susceptible to colds. And, too, in the hottest weather, when the heat seems almost unendurable, there is nothing equal to the cold plunge or shower bath to give relief from the heat.

Some seem to think that one should avoid exercise as much as possible in a hot climate, but my experience is that we need exercise, only we must be moderate, and not try to rush things too much. It is a good thing to keep busy, but not to work constantly at the same thing. Changing frequently from one kind of work to another, will usually give all the rest and relaxation that is needed. I believe it is very seldom that a worker loses his health simply from overwork, but it is more often caused by hurry, worry, or errors in diet. We, as missionaries, go out to work, not to be waited upon; and if we, with all the light we have on health and temperance, cannot keep well and work, how can we expect the ignorant and degraded natives, who are violating nearly every law of their being, to be able to do our work for us, even though they may be used to the climate? We may get accustomed to the climate too. If we begin right, I think we shall find that the climate will not affect us unfavorably, even at the first. It was so in our experience, for we never enjoyed better health than during our first year in the islands.

Of course we should not dress the same in a warm climate as in a cold one. Men readily lessen the amount of their clothing; but women sometimes cling to their close-fitting garments, to the detriment of their health; and often wear too much clothing, which makes them feel weak and tired; and they think it is caused by the climate. It is customary in these islands for the women to wear loose, flowing dresses; and the white women also wear them at home, and often wear no other style of dress. They are much more comfortable and cool than garments that fit close to the body about the waist, and also more healthful.

One of our experienced laborers, in giving advice to a company of missionaries who were soon to enter the island field, said that one of the first and last lessons we need to learn, is adaptation. That is very true. If we want to make a success in our new field, we must learn to adapt ourselves to the people and their customs as far as is practicable, and we must also learn to adapt our diet, dress, and work to the climate and the conditions.

Disease is very prevalent among the natives of these islands. Venereal diseases are almost universal, and repulsive skin diseases are seen on every hand. We are at times situated where we have to mingle freely with the people, living in the same house with them, and often eating the food prepared by them, though we always do our own cooking as far as possible. The common yellow laundry soap is said to be a good disinfectant, and we always make free use of it, washing our hands with it very frequently after being in contact with the people, and after shaking hands with them. The natives are not very cleanly in their habits, and that is one reason for so much skin disease among them. I am thankful to say that during all our years here, neither my wife nor I have ever contracted any of the native diseases.

When we have felt a cold or fever coming on, we have generally succeeded in stopping it at the beginning, simply by going without a meal or so or by eating less food and drinking an abundance of boiled water. By this simple means we have usually managed to keep well when all around us were suffering with the prevailing epidemic. Fasting is the best medicine I know of to cure, if taken when the first symptoms of indisposition are felt.

The malaria may not be so prevalent here as in parts of Africa, yet we have a great deal of it. When one gets it into the system, he has attacks of fever and chills, and it usually develops into elephantiasis. Where there is danger of malaria, a high and dry location is best for a home, where the sun and wind may have free access. There is much more dampness in low valleys than on the hills. Then the house should be set up a good distance from the ground, so that the air can circulate freely underneath. Too much shade is not good, and rubbish should not be allowed to accumulate in the vicinity of the dwelling house, for it breeds malaria. (See "Ministry of Healing," pp. 274-276.)

We have always made a practice of keeping the doors and windows of our sleeping rooms open night and day, so as to get all the pure air we could.

Some white people who come to the islands, seem to think they must live just as they always have lived in the country whence they came, even though everything here is very different from what it was there. We have not felt that it would be heresy to adapt ourselves to the customs and conditions of this country, but have tried to do so as far as it would be consistent with health and right. Many of the customs followed here are the very best for this climate, and where they are good, we want to adopt them, and adapt ourselves to the people as far as possible. When we came, we adopted this country as our home, though I cannot say that we felt at home for some time. We are planning to stay as long as the Lord does not call us to take up work elsewhere, or until the Lord comes and all our work on earth is done. We are looking for a city yet to come, and not until we enter there may we expect to find everything just right, and the effects of the curse entirely removed. B. J. CADY.

YOUR CALL.

The world is dark, but you are called to brighten
Some little corner, some secluded glen;
Somewhere a burden rests that you may lighten,
And thus reflect the Master's love for men.

Is there a brother drifting on life's ocean,
Who might be saved if you but speak a word?
Speak it to-day. The testing of devotion
Is our response when duty's call is heard.

The World-wide Field.

North England Conference.

THE North England Conference tithe increased during 1906 by £500. We organized three churches, and added 190 members. At the last gathering of this character, we voted to pay a double tithe into the British Union Conference treasury, and the Lord is blessing this, so that we have a surplus, after paying our workers and all other expenses, and paying the double tithe.

In Leeds we have two workers stationed, who have been able to gain access to one of the churches there, and have opportunities of speaking to the people, answering questions, etc.

Our tent work this summer has been interfered with by the inclement weather, one tent being torn by a storm; but in this town five substantial souls have since taken their stand for the truth. The others have met with some success, and the work still goes forward.

W. D. MACLAY.

South England Conference.

WE are very glad to be able to report a general growth and increase along every line in the South England Conference.

In Bowes Park a good little company of people is keeping the Sabbath; their attendance runs from thirty to forty people; some of these have moved in from other parts, but the majority of them are those who have taken their stand since the beginning of the work there.

At Hastings a good little church has been organized as the result of the tent effort held there last year.

During the first two quarters of 1907 there were twenty-three baptisms, and we have about thirty new Sabbath-keepers in the Conference. These have been largely the result of tent efforts. The most successful of these efforts has been at Bristol, where they have had a good attendance and interest from the first. The efforts in London and St. Leonards have also developed a few honest hearts that have embraced the truth. W. H. WAKEHAM.

Welsh Mission.

OUR staff of workers has varied, the regular number being seven, with three or four students this year, most of whom are returning to school. At present we have one ordained minister, three licentiates, five Bible-workers, and two other workers.

Work has been carried on by our workers in Cardiff, Newport, Pontypridd, Ebbw Vale, Bargoed, Pembroke Dock, etc., and in all these places souls have been added to the truth.

Our membership on June 30 was 192, being an increase of seventeen for the year over all losses. Since then we have added ten new members, so that our present membership is over 200. We have six churches and three companies, but regular meetings are being held in fourteen different towns.

The total tithe for the year ending June 30, amounted to £386 6s 7d, which is an increase of £80 6s 11d over the previous year. The interest in our first-day offerings has largely increased, no doubt because of our British East African Mission. For the last year we raised £26 19s 3d for this fund, which shows an increase of £24 10s 9d. Our Sabbath-school offerings amounted to £20 3s 5d, an increase of £2 12s 5d; annual offerings £18 7s 7d, an increase of £3 3s 1d; so that our total increase on all these funds amounted to £110 13s 4d, and all our offerings sent out of the field total £72 10s 3½d.

W. H. MEREDITH.

Irish Mission.

IRELAND has a total membership of eighty-eight. Eight were baptized during the year. The tithe received was £426 0s 8½d, an increase of about £22 over the previous year.

Two public efforts have been held in Belfast, and a few have accepted the truth there. An effort has also been conducted in Carnglass, County Antrim, where eight or ten people have become established in the truth. During the tent season, Elder Parsons and Brother Whiteside have been conducting a tent effort in Londonderry, and one or two have taken hold of the truth there, in spite of opposition. A first effort has also been made in Dublin in spite of warnings as to the Catholic spirit which predominates. Very little trouble occurred, and already fruit is being seen.

A Country Journey.

No. 1.

BEFORE I left Sin Yang Cheo, Brother Allum and I made a trip with Sister Pilquist (who was returning home) to her isolated station, about 120 li (about forty miles) inland. One can imagine a few of the difficulties to be encountered in transporting goods to such a locality. Remember the roadway is a bridle path among growing crops, and upon these roads only wheelbarrows and sedan chairs can be utilized as means of conveyance. Each sedan chair requires three men to carry it, at a cost of about 1s 6d per man. It is a tedious journey even in favorable weather. Fifteen hours, including stoppages, were required to make the trip, which was devoid of anything unusual under such conditions. We had to cross one river at low water by means of a boat. At one time one of my chair-bearers made a misstep, which almost landed me into the paddy-field of liquid mud.

The country presented a scene of great activity. The fields of wheat and barley had been gleaned, and were under preparation for the rice crop, which immediately follows.

To see an ox and an ass side by side, and attached by rude harness to a wooden plough, was quite an oddity. Reaching our destination at 9.30 P.M., and gaining admittance through the gates (which had long since been closed) by the bearers calling out that the gospel-workers had arrived, was a unique experience. Brother Pilquist was glad to see us, as the nearest foreigner is a missionary about twenty miles farther on, and as his near-by neighbors are the 10,000 Chinese among whom he lives and for whom he labors.

The next morning we were glad to see, if not to hear, the girls' school of twenty bright children, who were reciting and memorizing their lessons at the pitch of their voices. The boys had not yet returned from their summer vacation.

Later in the day we visited a temple containing numerous idols. Upon asking a Chinaman if the hideous objects could see, or hear, or fight, we received a negative answer. There were no worshippers to be seen, as the harvest and the planting season are busy times. The paintings on the walls were not calculated to draw adoring homage.

The evil representations of a modern pulpit hell, with its smoking fires containing serpents, and other heathenish tortures, prove the originator of such ideas to be none other than this very country's symbol—"the great red dragon."

Among the many things that impress one are the rough mud huts with straw roofs, and the little curiosity aroused by the presence of a foreigner.

As there are a number of peach orchards in the neighborhood, this delicious fruit could be purchased at the small cost of a half-penny a pound. Eggs are also very cheap, being as low as a penny farthing a dozen. The sum required to make the return trip was only ten pence for each man, as labor is much cheaper away from the railroad.

Soon after starting out for home, we were astonished to see a man proceed to light his pipe by means of the flint and steel process. It impressed me so much that I purchased the articles from the user for a half-penny, this amount being of course more than he had paid for them. The ignorance of the country people is indicated by the asking of foolish questions, such as, "Do you have a moon in your country?" and, "Have you the railway train?" It will thus be seen how backward the great masses of the people are; and yet the "grace of God which bringeth salvation hath appeared" even to such as these.

R. A. CALDWELL.

ENDURE TO THE END.

Why shouldst thou falter and faint by the way
Because of the burden thou art bearing each day?
Others have crosses and sorrow and care,
It is but right that thine thou shouldst bear.
Is the road dreary? There are footprints ahead.
Do the thorns pierce thee? Here others have bled.
Is thy load heavy as 'neath it thou dost bow?
Then Jesus will help thee, so ask of Him now.
Bear up a while longer; there may be for thee
Rich blessings ahead, and thy burdens will flee;
Keep hoping and trusting, press on to the goal;
A blessing awaiteth the conquering soul.

Religious Liberty.

Studies in Liberty.

Limits of Civil Government.

"And ye were now turned, and had done right in My sight, in proclaiming liberty every man to his neighbor." Jer. 34: 15.

"FOR for this cause pay ye tribute also; for they are God's ministers, attending continually upon this very thing. Render therefore to all their dues: tribute to whom tribute is due; custom to whom custom; fear to whom fear; honor to whom honor."

"And when Gallio was the deputy of Achaia, the Jews made insurrection with one accord against Paul, and brought him to the judgment seat, saying, This fellow persuadeth men to worship God contrary to the law. And when Paul was now about to open his mouth, Gallio said unto the Jews, If it were a matter of wrong or wicked lewdness, O ye Jews, reason would that I should bear with you: But if it be a question of words and names, and of your law, look ye to it; for I will be no judge of such matters. And he drave them from the judgment seat."

Civil government comprehends just what the name indicates,—"A government pertaining to a city or State, or to a citizen in his relations to his fellow-citizens, or to the State."

The definition of religion is: "The recognition as an object of worship, love, and obedience."—Webster.

Another definition is: "Man's relation of faith and obedience to God." "A belief binding the spiritual nature of man to a supernatural being on whom he is conscious that he is dependent: also, the practice that springs out of the recognition of such relation, including the personal life and experience, the doctrine, the duties, and the rites founded on it."—Standard Dictionary.

From the very fact that the civil government is one of God's ministers, it would be unthinkable to suppose that every duty of man should fall within its jurisdiction, or that all men should be accountable to God through it in every matter. This is plainly the teaching of Paul in Romans 13: 1-10. It is the definite fact as commanded by Jesus in the statement to render to the civil government that duty for which it was ordained to supervise; but in other matters, such as religion, each individual is to render service to God direct, and without any reference to Caesar.

This idea is understood perfectly from every-day experiences. No government delegates all its powers to one minister, nor does it make all subjects responsible to him in all matters. It appoints a minister of public works, and outlines his duties and responsibilities. Every citizen who has anything to do with the "public works" is amenable to the government through its minister. In all other appointments this principle holds good; but should any minister exceed his authority, and attempt to supervise matters over which the government had given him no control, every loyal citizen would refuse his direction.

God has made His plan very plain both by precept and in His dealings with the nations. The Lord ordained the kingdom of Babylon in temporal, or civil, matters; and commanded all the people to come under that government, but strictly forbade it to exercise any jurisdiction in matters of religion. When the great image was set up in the Plain of Dura, and all the people commanded to fall down and worship, the faithful children of God refused to obey. In all civil matters they had complied with the direction of the government, but in the matter of worship they could not be disloyal to God in order to obey a servant who had never been authorized to require worship or non-worship. When the three refused to worship according to the decree, they were cast into the fiery furnace. Christ went with them and suffered the fire to do them no harm. Only their bonds were burned. They were reinstated in the government, and a decree was made that no one should say anything against the God of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego. Now this was a well-intended decree, but it was all wrong because God had never empowered the king to require people to worship Him any more than He had instructed him to require the people to worship the idol. This was entirely out of his jurisdiction.

Although God never coerces in matters of religion, soon Babylon again arrogated to herself the power of supreme dictator, instead of remaining a servant in civil affairs. She was the author of her own doom. God gave the kingdom to the Medes and Persians because they recognized Him, and the rights of men in matters of worship. All too soon, however, Medo-Persia forgot God and the rights of men; the government decided that no one should be allowed to ask any petition of any god, except the king, for thirty days. Daniel knew that this was wholly outside of the sphere of civil government; and hence, as a matter of course, refused to obey. He was cast into the lions' den, but God sent an angel to protect him. He was reinstated in the government. Thus the Lord again in a very special manner, impressed upon all that the sphere of civil government is limited wholly to civil affairs. But in their thirst for power how slow governments are to learn their appointed sphere, and how prone to forget the lessons taught! Medo-Persia sounded her own death-knell, and the kingdom was given to another people.

The fact that the State can never of right have any jurisdiction in matters of faith and worship,—except to protect men in this right,—is forever settled in the experience of the apostles. When constituted government authority commanded them to preach no more in the name of Jesus, God told them to go and teach the very doctrines forbidden by those in authority. When they were put in prison by the rulers for preaching the resurrection, the Lord sent an angel to unshackle them and to open the prison doors. Everyone who carefully reads and believes the Bible, cannot remain in doubt that the province of civil government is limited to a man's relation to man and to the State in a civil capacity; that its mission is to protect man in the enjoyment of his God-given rights; but never to dictate or coerce in matters of religion.

"To protect liberty of conscience is the duty of the State, and this is the limit of its authority in matters of religion. Every secular government that attempts to regulate or enforce religious observances of civil authority, is sacrificing the very principle for which the evangelical Christians so nobly struggled."—Great Controversy, p. 201.

Questions.

1. Whose minister is civil government? Rom. 13: 3, 4; Ps. 22: 28; Prov. 8: 14-16.

2. In what sphere has it been appointed to act? Ex. 22:1-15; Deut. 19:10-18; Acts 18:12-15. Never in religious controversies except to require civil peace.

3. Who ordained the kingdom of Babylon, and what did God call the king? Rom. 13:1-7. Dan. 4:32; Jer. 25:9.

4. How did it supersede its rightful powers? Dan. 3:1-6, 29; Isa. 47:6-11.

5. How did God correct the rulers? Dan. 3:16-18; 22-26; 4:22, 23.

6. Why was Babylon finally brought to ruin? Dan. 5:1-4, 23-31. Last decree was against God and His people.

7. Why did the Lord give the kingdom to the Medes and Persians? Ezra 1:1-5; 7:15; Isa. 45:1-6.

8. What fatal mistake of Babylon did the Medo-Persian kingdom finally attempt to perpetuate? Dan. 6:4-9.

9. Why was it finally overturned, and its place given to another people?—For the same reason that Babylon was overturned. One of the last-known decrees of Babylon and Medo-Persia was against God, and the rights of His people in matters of worship.

10. How are limits of civil government made plain in the lives and work of the apostles? Acts 4:1-10, 18, 19; 5:17-29.

Our Mission Field.

A Trip to Vanua Levu, Fiji.

I AM returning from a trip to Vanua. I have had a very pleasant time, and have had a profitable two weeks' time with the small company of half-castes at Wainunu. The number has grown from eight to eleven, and there is a good prospect of others taking their stand.

They are well pleased with Josefati, the native teacher whom we have appointed to that place. They will build him a house, give him a piece of ground and the planting stuff, and build him a small boat.

They have a large number of children who will form the basis for a strong school later on. I will follow with interest the development of the work in this large island. May we not have your prayers for a quick work there.

Our Mission boat, the Cina, came very near being wrecked on the Vanua Levu coast in a heavy storm. Her anchor dragged, and it was only the hand of God that lifted her over the reef, and placed her in calm waters. Only a very little damage was done.

Brother Gordon Smith was with me on this trip. I enjoyed his presence very much, and he was a great help in many ways. He is doing well in learning the language, and it will not be long before he will be conversant with it. We are glad of his association in the work here.

OUR MISSIONARIES.

They have journeyed far on a stormy tide
To the friendless shore and the strange hillside,
Where the wild winds sigh and the darkness creeps;
For their hearts are sad with a world that weeps,
And theirs is a love that never sleeps.

Where the stress is great and the battle long,
They strengthen their faith with psalm and song;
And if for guerdon they have defeat,
The hymns of their angels are ever sweet,
And they take their rest at the Master's feet.

God is the source of their secret strength,
They trust in Him, and they see at length
That morn is breaking after the night,
And the harvest fields are gold and white,
While shines around them God's fadeless light.

But who shall follow where they have led?
Who live and labor and love instead?
O, hearts of youth, earth waits for you;
Be strong and brave, be firm and true,
Faithfully promise, and nobly do!

The Circulation of Our Books in Singapore.

IN a retrospective glance at our work in Singapore, let us look at that department which has accomplished the most, and which is destined yet to do a still greater work, and without which the cause would make but little headway.

Brother Caldwell started with "Desire of Ages," thoroughly canvassing the city of Singapore; after which he pushed his work in the towns and villages of the countries up the Malay Peninsula, then entering Siam, and afterwards the Philippines. Hundreds of this large, pioneering book were placed in the homes of those who can read English, amounting to nearly £400 in retail value. But we cannot begin to estimate the real value of the work accomplished, because it is of heaven. The everlasting truth has shone into the minds of thousands living in the heathen lands of the Far East, the parts of the earth farthest from where the third angel's message was first heard and accepted. And does not this show, therefore, that it is in its last territory? and doing now its closing work?

When the Lord, as "Governor among the nations," permitted the British in former years to gain commercial and political supremacy in the East in preference to other nations who struggled for it, it was because Britain would become an educator, and lift these Eastern people to a level with her own love of liberty and educational advantages. During the first years of the proclamation of the third angel's message, and since 1858 when India became a vassalage of the crown of England, education in the East, like the light of day, quickly radiated into every province; and ever since there has been a waking up among the nations of the Far East. Why is this awakening so manifest to all at this time?—Because the time has come for God to cut His work short in righteousness; and as there have been years of preparation among the people to learn to read, God now sends forth canvassers with books laden with His message to them. The time has fully come for the last stroke of the hammer of truth to be dealt to them in this way.

The canvasser opportunely enters; and to his wonder and delight he finds the people captivated under his persuasive canvass for the book; and thus books enter into homes, many of the inmates of which have not yet even learned to read rightly; but the impelling force of this movement of God cannot be resisted. Many have said afterwards, "I do not know why I have bought this book."

Now let us follow our second canvasser, and see if they can refuse the next book offered them. Brother Parkin comes, and starts right in with his book just where Brother Caldwell did, and follows him into the towns and villages of the Malay Peninsula, generally getting more orders than refusals; he labors apparently under greater disadvantages. The missionaries have since the sale of the first book been busy preaching and instructing the people against buying our books. Lectures have been held, and booklets have been published and scattered all over, but somehow all to no purpose: the second book, "Daniel and Revelation," cannot be refused. The rage of the missionaries is now tenfold; however, the book is taken although more often laid upon the shelf than read. We are not pleased with this, for it looks like a defeat of our purpose after all, but it is not really so, as we shall see later on.

Next in order comes Brother Timothy with our Malay "Christ Our Saviour," beginning in the same place as the other two, and going over the same ground. But how do we find the people? Are they not sick of books by this time? Whether they are or no, this book goes into the homes just as well as the others. When Timothy is out with his books, his experiences are as if he is under inspiration, and so he is; men have growled like bears at him and ordered him away, but in spite of this he succeeds in getting their orders in a few minutes. Some purposely avoid meeting him, but Timothy, sooner or later, finds them again and succeeds in getting an order. Invariably when Timothy returns to the Mission house after working one or two hours, he says, "Six canvasses, six orders" or "Eleven canvasses, ten orders." For half a century the Lord has been preparing these nations for the canvasser to step in at the opportune time, and that is now. God calls canvassers to the front now.

The oft-repeated testimony ought to be quoted again here: "If there is one work more important than another, it is that of getting our publications before the public, thus leading them to study the Scriptures." We are now studying this all-important question—how to get our publications before the millions of Malaysia with their many languages. The Lord will send us capable translators as soon as we are willing to move forward. This was demonstrated to us a little while ago; a very well-educated young Chinaman called at our house, and became interested in our work; later he did some translating for us, and we got it printed in Chinese character. Finding it necessary to get this and other Chinese literature out, we chose two of our Chinese converts to go and sell them. At first they insisted that nothing much could be done with them, as they had done a similar work for other missions and had no success; but we told them that God was in this movement, and the books would be sold, so they went out and sold them, the number of copies sold now amounting to nearly 5,000. This demonstrates to us that the field is ripe, and faithful canvassers are in demand to help our meagre number.

I quote from the "Testimonies," Vol. 6, as follows: "Now, just now, is our time to work in foreign countries." "The canvassing work properly conducted is missionary work of the highest order." "The time has come when a large work should be done by the canvassers." "If he puts his trust in the Lord as he travels from place to place, angels of God will be around about him." "The importance of the canvassing work is ever kept before me. There is no higher work than evangelistic canvassing."

"It is true that some who buy the books will lay them on the shelf or place them on the parlor table, and seldom look at them. Still God has a care for His truth, and the time will come when these books will be sought for and read. Sickness or misfortune may enter the home, and through the truth contained in the books, God sends to troubled hearts peace and hope and rest. Thus the Lord coöperates with His self-denying workers." MISSIONARY CAMPAIGN.

Who, then, Is Willing?

No. 3.

IN our first article we referred to the need of a "literature fund" to enable us to make a big effort to meet the work of the International Reform Bureau. We are glad for the response our brethren and sisters have made so far, but much, very much more, must be done speedily. We know that the great majority of our people are not wealthy, yet they can do far more if they will but heed the counsel of God in their manner of living.

We are told that we are to "cut off our imaginary wants." If this were done, and only the real necessities looked for, thousands of pounds could be placed in the treasury. How much is spent needlessly by our people on "imaginary wants." Useless articles of adornment are bought continually. Pride is fostered and appetite pampered in a hundred ways which are not befitting to those who profess to be looking for the Lord's coming. Is it not time we called a halt on these things, and "made a covenant with the Lord by sacrifice?" We shall not be included in that company which are to be "gathered" if we fail in this. (Psalm 50: 5.)

Shall we not begin this work of "sacrifice" right now, and give the Lord that which costs us something. It is easy to give what we do not want, but this message calls for more than that. "Is not this the fast that I have chosen? . . . To deal thy bread to the hungry?" This is "sacrifice"—give what we want for ourselves. Then we shall in some degree enter into the joy of our Lord.

Send in your donations, brethren and sisters, so that we can lay our plans for a vigorous campaign with our Religious Liberty literature. Believing this to be your desire, we are getting the tracts printed. Now we urge you to send in your "sacrifices" to help pay for them. In this way you will be laying up treasure in heaven, and great will be your reward. Think of the time when under the tree of life you shall meet, and shall clasp the hands of, those whom your sacrifices have helped there. You will say with others, "Heaven is cheap enough." This will be your pleasure if you will make it your sacrifice now.

"Who, then, is willing?"

The Maori Work.

A FEW lines received from one of our missionaries in the Maori work, will be of interest to all. Brother Redward, who, with his family, has recently located at Tologa Bay, writes from that place as follows:—

During the first week we attended no less than ten cases of sickness, and I have had some good spiritual talks with some of them. Just lately a little boy died, and the friends and relatives have been crying more or less since, so we must wait until they are over this before we can do much in the way of meetings. When one of the Maoris die, the custom is for his relatives to come from far and near, and visit the bereaved ones. They approach the close relations, and all cry for about half an hour before they shake hands and rub noses. We realize that it is dangerous work going in and out amongst them; for lung complaint is so prevalent.

I am sure that the RECORD readers will join us in praying that the Lord will shield these workers from disease, and spare them to win souls for His kingdom from amongst this dying race of people. Brother Redward has recently procured a number of charts, books, and tracts to aid him in presenting the message in a forcible and attractive way to them. We trust that ere long we shall receive encouraging word of the response the natives are giving to the preaching of the message. Pray with us, brethren and sisters, that the Lord may prepare their hearts for the reception of His holy truths, that their lives may be ennobled by them, and they thus be prepared for His coming. J. F. JOHNSTONE.

A School of Health.

SISTER TENA JUDGE writes from Tasmania:—

I would have returned to Sydney by the end of August were it not that I was holding a school of health here for six weeks in the Cafe dining-room, which I am sure has helped the sale of health foods somewhat. I spoke first on such subjects as "Our Choice of Foods—Animal or Vegetable?" "Starch Indigestion and Its Causes," "Beverages—Tea and Its Effects on the System," "Fresh Air, Sunlight, and Ventilation," "Fruit and Its Value," "Sleep, Dress, Exercise,—How and When to Take It?"—six lectures in all with chemical tests, followed by practical food demonstrations and sampling, answering questions, etc.

There were twelve who took the whole six weeks, and several who came when circumstances permitted, willingly paying sixpence each for every hour and a half. All were greatly pleased, and appreciated all they learned. To some of their homes I have gone, and given further lessons. From others I have received letters, telling me how thankful they are, and of their efforts to follow out the instruction given. This work could be still carried on if there were anyone to do it. Some of these subjects were asked for, and would probably be appropriate for schools of health in general if anyone were starting them for the first time.

SPEAK kindly to others as you are passing through this life; and if possible, give them a lift on the way. How sweet the thought must be, when we come to die, that during our lives we have been useful to others. And surely it must be a mean death to die with the knowledge that we have only been good to ourselves.—Geo. R. Scott.

Notes and Personals.

BROTHER HENNIG returned from the Queensland Conference on October 1, and stopped at the Avondale School for a few days.

SISTER M. H. TUXFORD, who is so well known to our readers, has been appointed Corresponding Secretary of the Southern Union Conference in the United States.

PASTOR QUINN and wife sailed from Melbourne, August 27, for the United States, going by way of Egypt. They expect to labor on the Pacific Coast.

BROTHER HODGKISON arrived in Toowoomba, Queensland, from Tasmania, September 25, to take up his duties in the former Conference as State Agent.

PASTOR ROBERT HARE has been laboring in Mount Gambier, South Australia, since the camp-meeting. As the result of the work there, eight have begun keeping the Sabbath.

AT the close of the Queensland Conference, Brother Johanson and Sister Annie Higgins visited several of the churches, and held meetings with them in the interests of the Missionary Campaign.

BROTHER J. E. STEED and family left Adelaide on September 27 by the S. S. Kyarra for Sydney, the first stage of their journey to Samoa, where they go in harmony with the recommendation of the Union Conference Council.

SISTER NETTIE CARSWELL, who was recommended to connect with the work in Singapore, joined the party on the S. S. Airlie, on October 4, at Brisbane. Sister Carswell will connect with the work at the Eastern Training School.

THE South Australian Conference has chosen Brother Lemke to act as the State Canvassing Agent, in the place of Brother Blunden, who was recommended by the Union Conference Council to connect with the School in West Australia.

WE have just received a weekly report, which excels all previous records from our canvassers. It is from Brother Parkin, of the East Indian field; and the orders taken during the week for "Daniel and Revelation," amounted to £72 18s; the two following weeks his reports were respectively £63 7s 6d and £63 2s 6d. This shows how abundantly the Lord is blessing in the distribution of literature in that field.

ON Sabbath, August 10, at the British Union Conference meeting held at Nottingham, four who have given ample proof that they are called of God, were ordained for the work of the gospel ministry. In writing of this ordination service, Pastor Conradi says that so far as his knowledge goes, this is the first time in the history of the work in Great Britain that four promising men could at one time be set apart to the ministry. These were W. T. Bartlett, editor of the Present Truth; R. Mussen, who has been laboring in Ireland; and D. P. Miller and A. E. Bacon, of Scotland.

As Brother and Sister Cady have spent so many years in a tropical climate, and have been able to maintain such excellent health, Brother Cady was requested to give our readers some information in reference to their manner of life, as it was thought that others who are constantly entering these fields, would be glad of any hints and suggestions that have been the out-growth of long experience. We believe that the first-page contribution, by Brother Cady, will be read with much interest and profit.

THE readers of the RECORD will be pleased to hear that a sufficient number of orders have already been received for the Smokers' Number of the Good Health to warrant the Avondale Press in running 12,500 copies the first imprint. Of these, 6,000 go to regular readers, the other 6,500 are "extra." All but about 1,000 of these extra copies have been ordered by New South Wales, Queensland, New Zealand, South Australia, and other conferences have not yet been heard from, but we are sure they will not come behind in this good work of fighting a gigantic evil by scattering broadcast the truth about tobacco. Scores of churches are yet to be heard from, and with such a promising start we hope to see our expectations for a 20,000 issue of this special number far exceeded. Let all do their part in giving to the Smokers' Number of the Good Health the same support accorded the Temperance Number of the Signs. May the Lord bless our united efforts, and give us good success.

A SANITARIUM patient has paid for 720 copies of the Smokers' Number of the Good Health. The Sanitarium workers have promised to place these in the hands of smokers. Others who cannot go about distributing these papers themselves, may desire to help in this same way by contributions. In lots of 500 or more the Avondale Press is supplying this issue at one penny per copy, so that a contribution of £4 pays for printing nearly 1,000.

Those who cannot pay for 1,000 will be blessed in paying for 100 at the same rate, 8s 4d. Still others can pay for the printing of a few dozen copies, while many more can help to distribute the papers that have thus been bought.

"He best deserves the knightly crest
Who slays the evils that infest
The soul within. . . If victor here,
He soon will find a wider sphere."

Progress in the British Union Conference.

As we note the progress this cause has made since we met in London last year, we are led to exclaim: "Behold what God hath wrought."

Twenty-nine years have passed since the work of proclaiming this message in this field, was begun, but these have been years of seed-sowing, and now the increase is beginning to appear.

During 1906 seven churches were organized, 276 candidates were baptized, and thirty-three were received into the church by vote, making a total of 309, or a net increase of 212, bringing our membership up from 1,515 in 1905 to 1,727 in 1906. Our staff of field workers has also been increased. At the close of 1906 we had sixteen ordained ministers, fifteen licentiates, nineteen Bible-workers, and fourteen miscellaneous workers. Besides this we had about seventy agents in the field handling our books, and 100 more handling our periodicals, making a total of sixty-four on the Conference pay-roll, and 170 self-supporting workers, 234 in all.

Interesting Experiences.

Our home missionary workers are continually sending to us little snatches of very interesting experiences they enjoy while engaged in their work. The following is quoted from a private letter from one of our most enthusiastic workers, who lives in a district where there are many Maoris:—

"The Maoris have been holding a land court in R——, so after much fear and trembling, I managed to introduce myself and 'Christ's Object Lessons' to Rawhiti, secretary to the king, who lives near the school. He replied, 'But I cannot read English well; if you had a Maori book, I would buy that.' I put my hand in my bag and drew out a Maori 'Christ Our Saviour,' saying, 'I have one here, but it is not the same as the other. The price is 2s 6d.' He asked me if it would help the school, and I replied 'No.' However, he went across to the school, and got the 2s 6d, and on returning he asked to see the 'Christ's Object Lessons,' and began reading as well as he could. After that he took the Maori 'Christ Our Saviour' out of his pocket, and went through it, reading a little at each picture for more than half an hour to an audience of Maoris, till it was time for him to go into the hall. I wished I had a dozen Maori books in my hand then. From there I went to the doctor's home, whose wife asked me what I had been doing among the Maoris. I said, 'Trying to sell a book, and I will now sell you one.' They took one at once, and paid me before I delivered it. You will imagine how happy I was when I reached home."—New Zealand Messenger.

A Young People's Meeting.

On Sunday, September 29, the last day of the Queensland Camp-meeting, the forenoon meeting was devoted to a young people's missionary service. Much earnest labor had been put in in preparing for this meeting, and all who took part in the programme certainly did credit both to themselves and their instructors.

Brother Johanson occupied the chair, and, in his introductory remarks, said that the design of such meetings was not alone a means of drawing the young people together to engage in a pleasing service, but it should serve to elevate the missionary idea. The first item on the programme was a recitation by Brother A. Merritt, entitled, "The Foreign Missionary." The poem beautifully expressed the willing sacrifice made by the men and women who leave their home-land to carry the glad tidings of salvation to the heathen. Another pleasing item was a company recitation by six little children. "The Penny Investment," a recitation by Miss M. Bernoth, was surely calculated to inspire confidence in investing money for the Lord's work. A very attractive item was "The Missionary Council," in which upwards of twenty young men and women took part. Recitations were also given by several others.

The programme was interspersed with solos and choruses. An appeal was made on behalf of the New Guinea Mission, and a little over £7 was raised for the support of a native worker in that field.

Where Some Can Help.

Many of our people, also our young people's societies, are anxious to help the island work, but are not able to do as much as they would like through lack of funds. Here is one way by which many can help the School at Buresala, Fiji. First and second-hand clothing of all descriptions for men or women, boys or girls, or children, are always acceptable, and can be put to good use. Some clothing will have to be altered somewhat, but this can be done by the sewing class, which now numbers eight. Who will interest themselves in this matter, and thus help to relieve a pressing need?

Please send all parcels to your State tract society, from which they can be forwarded to the Union Conference Office, Burwood Street, Burwood.

S. W. and E. M. Carr.
