The Patmos Life

Our God makes no mistakes, though strange to us
May seem the workings of His will. Upon
The isle called Patmos, John, an exile wept,
And prayed and talked with Him who holds the sea
Within His hands. Aye, strange it seemed to take
One from a work that was to be world-wide,
And mighty in its power—yea, one that loved
The work, the Master, and the world. To him
His hopes seemed blasted, and his plans as naught;
And yet in Patmos came a service grand,
Most wonderful—a wider service than
The one beloved had ever dreamed. His heart
And life were raptured by the scenes that love
Revealed—the glorious visions of our God;
And down to us have come those visions bright,
The trumpet voices and the glimpses of a home
Where hosts of angels dwell.
The Spirit waits
To isolate our lives, to give us views
More wide, to take us, as it were, afar
To Patmos in its loveliness; for earth
And earthly cares crowd out the Spirit's power,
Prevent our eyes from seeing things unseen.
But John had stood close by the cross of Christ,
His head had touched the bosom of his Lord.
Because of this, the visions on the isle
Were possible; and so if we would know
The blessedness, and fulness of that joy,
And see beyond the portals of this life,
We too must bow before the cross, we too
Must insulated be by His own power,
And live the Patmos life. His Spirit then
Through us will flow out to a weary world.

The Work of the Holy Spirit

THE nature of the Holy Spirit is a mystery. Men cannot explain it, because the Lord has not revealed it to them. Men having fanciful views may bring together passages of Scripture and put a human construction on them; but the acceptance of these views will not strengthen the church. Regarding such mysteries, which are too deep for human understanding, silence is golden.

The office of the Holy Spirit is distinctly specified in the words of Christ: "When He is come, He will reprove the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment." It is the Holy Spirit that convicts of sin. If the sinner responds to the quickening influence of the Spirit, he will be brought to repentance, and aroused to the importance of obeying the divine requirements.

To the repentant sinner, hungering and thirsting for righteousness, the Holy Spirit reveals the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world. "He shall receive of Mine, and shall show it unto you," Christ said. "He shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you."

The Spirit is given as a regenerating agency, to make effectual the salvation wrought by the death of our Redeemer. The Spirit is constantly seeking to draw the attention of men to the great offering that was made on the cross of Calvary, to unfold to the world the love of God, and to open to the convicted soul the precious things of the Scriptures.

Having brought conviction of sin, and presented before the mind the standard of righteousness, the Holy Spirit withdraws the affections from the things of this earth, and fills the soul with a desire for holiness. "He will guide you into all truth," the Saviour declared. If men are willing to be moulded, there will be brought about a sanctification of the whole being. The Spirit will take the things of God and stamp them on the soul. By His power the way of life will be made so plain that none need err therein.

From the beginning God has been working by His Holy Spirit through human instrumentalities for the accomplishment of His purpose in behalf of the fallen race. This was manifest in the lives of the patriarchs. To the church in the wilderness also, in the time of Moses, God gave His "good Spirit to instruct them." And in the days of the apostles He wrought mightily for His church through the agency of the Holy Spirit. The same power that sustained the patriarchs, that gave Caleb and Joshua faith and courage, and that made the work of the apostolic church effective, has upheld God's faithful children in every succeeding age. It was through the power of the Holy Spirit that during the Dark Ages the Waldensian Christians helped to prepare the way for the Reformation. It was the same power that made successful the efforts of the noble men and women who pioneered the way for the establishment of modern missions, and for the translation of the Bible into the languages and dialects of all nations and people.

And to-day God is still using His church to make known His purpose in the earth. To-day the heralds of the cross are going from city to city, and from land to land, preparing the way for the second advent of Christ. The standard of God's law is being exalted. The Spirit of the Almighty is moving upon men's hearts, and those who respond to its influence become witnesses for God and His truth. In many places consecrated men and women may be seen communicating to others the light that has made plain to them the way of salvation through Christ. And as they continue to let their light shine, as did those who were baptized with the Spirit on the day of Pentecost, they receive more and still more of the Spirit's power. Thus the whole earth is to be lightened with the glory of God.

Satan Tempts, but God Tests

"IF thou faint in the day of adversity, thy strength is small," says the wise man. Many regard adversity as a legitimate excuse for relinquishing principles and practises that are heaven-born and heaven-commanded.

Adversity may be brought upon us by the enemy to tempt us to loosen our hold upon God, and the Lord permits it to test our strength. We may not be cognizant of our real weakness, and only by allowing a test to come to us can He cause us to realize our condition. If we fail in the test, it is made evident to ourselves that our strength is small. We know that the omnipotent arm of the Lord is ours to command in our behalf at all times, so we have no valid reason for failing in time of adversity.

If we fail, it is because we are trusting to our own small strength instead of grasping the omnipotent arm of the Lord so lovingly and longingly outstretched to us. Let us not faint when so great strength is freely offered us.—Selected.

"MOTHS do not destroy the garments that are in use, nor do sins corrupt a busy life. It is when the body is relaxed that malaria seizes upon it; and it is in its hour of need that the soul becomes diseased."

WORLD-WIDE

At a General Meeting, Hankow, China

THERE were seventy-six believers in attendance at our general meeting recently held in Hankow. They all plan and look forward to these meetings just as we do to general meetings at home. Some of these people begin several months ahead to plan for their board during the meeting, by giving a few coppers every week to our evangelist, who keeps the money for them, so they might be sure to have the right amount at the right time. As for their travelling expenses, they walk; some over a hundred miles each way. This they did in order that they might be able to testify to what the Lord had done for them, and also that they might gain a spiritual blessing. Indeed, these seasons are times of great refreshing to us all. The brethren get right with brethren; sins are confessed; heathen are converted; and many times scoffers are turned to praisers.

At this meeting twenty-one were baptized. We have now a membership of sixty at this place.

Before separating, we enjoyed a blessed season about the Lord's table in a communion service. Heart seemed to meet heart. As confessions were made these seventy souls, most of whom had sometime bowed to wood and stone, and naturally would be hard to make of one purpose and one heart, united as one, and God's quiet Spirit rested on all. As we sang to close our meeting, all hearts, now filled with the love of Jesus and for one another, seemed to echo the words of the song:

"Blest be the tie that binds
Our hearts in Christian love;
The fellowship of kindred minds
Is like to that above."

What One Korean Tract Did

THE place where I live has from the beginning been a village which has not known the true God and has been given to sinful, unprofitable ways.

While in this condition, some four or five years ago, a woman passing by this village dropped a small tract. This was found by a crippled man. While reading it many times, he learned the first principles of life. He decided to worship the true God, and believe in Jesus Christ. He bought a song-book, and from the first to the last song, memorized it. Then a Bible was purchased. As he studied it day and night, he clearly understood that these are the last days of earth's history. With zeal he preached to all his neighbours and friends, and a company of believers was formed. Ten and more were the result of this cripple's teaching what he had learned from that tract.

Whistling the Tune: The Bond of Fellowship

NOT long ago a young missionary landed on the shores of Korea to take charge of our mission printing-house in Seoul, Korea. The following is an extract from his letter:

"On the last day of my trip, en route from Fusan to Seoul, I felt somewhat alone, as none of my fellow passengers could speak much English. We had not been riding long when some one in the rear of the car began to sing, "I Love to Tell the Story." I could not understand the words, but knew from the tune what the person was singing. It seemed so good to know that there was one in this strange land who loved to tell the story of Jesus, that I wanted to look him in the face. It turned out to be a young man from Japan; and as he had no objection, I sat down in the seat with him. We could not converse much because of the language, but we could both whistle, and so a happy hour was spent in whistling some of our good old hymns. We took turns starting the tune, and if the other was acquainted with it, he would join in and we would whistle it through. If not, we would try another. It seemed good. One hardly appreciates those good songs when he hears them every day in the homeland, but when alone in a strange place like this, he longs for just one strain even of the music."

"All sunshine would wither, all shadow would blight;
But mingling them wisely, the Father of Light
Through pleasure and sunshine, through sorrow and showers,
Brings on to perfection our souls and His flowers."

Atchin, New Hebrides

It is with sorrow of heart that we send these few lines to our friends in the homeland. Since the last mail left us, we have had to lay in the grave the youngest member of our mission family, Harold Patterson Carr, aged almost eight and a half months.

He had been suffering for a few days with a slight cold, though nothing to cause us anxiety; but on Sabbath, October 4, he began to breathe rapidly and showed signs of acute bronchitis. He soon grew worse and in spite of all that could be done, he became unconscious by 10 o'clock that night and never rallied again, sinking peacefully to rest at 1.30 a.m. on Monday.

It has been a sad trial to all at the mission to part with baby Harold, but "we sorrow not as others." We are united by just one more link to that glad day when the call of the Life-giver will raise our little one and restore him to us again.

We feel that his death has been used of God to preach a sermon to the heathen around us, and it was touching to see them bring flowers and lay them on his sleeping form in the coffin, at the conclusion of a short service at the house on Monday morning. We know that his short life was not lived in vain. The natives have always showed in their crude way that they loved him, and many came, both at the funeral and afterward, to tell us that they were sorry that he was gone from our midst. Several times we were able to tell them something of the resurrection morning, heaven, and the means of getting there, as they would ask questions concerning him.

The service at the grave was attended by Mr. Farrell and family, and by about fifteen heathen natives. It was the first Christian burial on Atchin.

While it has grieved us deeply to be called to lay aside our darling boy, we look up to our Father's face and say, "Thy will be done," and we know that holy angels mark his resting place beside a mango tree on the mission grounds, and soon he will come forth again to die no more.

Our trust and stay is in the Lord and the promises of His Word, the one giving most comfort being that found in Jer. 31:15-17.

Aitutaki, Cook Islands

As we take another step in advance in the prosecution of our work in Aitutaki, we are caused to rejoice and to thank Him from whom all blessings come. I wish to write a few lines today to tell you of our baptismal service and the organization of our church on Aitutaki.

On the first Sabbath of October, it was announced that a baptismal service would be held for those who wished to be received into church membership. Eight made request for baptism. Later in the day one other gave in his name. Several days after two other names were received, making a total of eleven. It was two weeks before we could all be together on a Sabbath for the celebration of the ordinance. On Friday night preceding the Sabbath of baptism, I spoke on John 13:8, "If I wash thee not thou hast no part with Me." The Spirit impressed the words upon the hearers as I urged them to put away sin and live the new life of which baptism is a sign. I wish you could have been with us on that day to see with what seriousness the candidates took part in the ordinance. We assembled on the wharf before the village, and there, with but few spectators, the brethren followed the Lord in the sacred rite. Several were in tears from the beginning of the meeting. Our first hymn was sung very brokenly, owing to some being unable to sing continuously. A few remarks were made on the words of Christ, who said, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." We all felt the Spirit of God very near us, and a lasting impression was made on many hearts.

As we went to the wharf the sun was shining in his strength, as he is only able to do in the tropics. However, as our service began, a cloud completely covered the sun until the close, when it passed on. The native brethren regarded it as a visible evidence that our service was acceptable to God; and still take pleasure in speaking of this occurrence.

Sabbath, October 25, was appointed as the day for church organization. At twelve o'clock we met for preaching service, at which time I explained the nature of church relationship, and the reason for organization, after which we proceeded to admit the eleven dear brethren and sisters, who had been baptized into the church. It was a very solemn occasion for us all. Several who realized their weakness and unworthiness wept as they stood each in his turn before me. A deacon and deaconess were chosen, but not ordained, and the meeting closed. Our service was necessarily long, lasting about one hour and a half, but no one showed signs of weariness.

It had been previously announced that our first communion service would be held in the afternoon at the regular service at 4 p.m. The meeting began with singing, Scripture reading, and prayer, followed by testimonies in which nearly every one took part, telling of their joy in the knowledge of the truth which they had accepted. Several wept and praised God alternately; and one, whose husband had not yet accepted the truth, feared to rise knowing that she would be unable to speak for weeping.

One brother told what a wicked life he had lived, and how after seeing the truth he had held to his tobacco for several months, but after having been talked with three times and asked to pray for help to overcome the habit, he found it comparatively easy to give it up. Another old brother told how he had several years ago dreamed a dream which made a lasting impression upon his mind. In his dream he saw a Protestant missionary clothed in rags standing before him, and also an Adventist minister with his wife both clothed in white. He awoke. Upon sleeping again he dreamed the same dream. It was sufficient to prove to him that the truth was with the Adventists, and he had waited year after year for them to establish a mission on Aitutaki. When we entered Aitutaki, this brother, though holding a position in a native Protestant church, prepared us a place in which to live, and though censured by his church, attended all our meetings, until at last he publicly announced in his church that he was leaving to unite with the Adventists. This meant a sacrifice to him because he had been the chief carpenter in rebuilding the newly dedicated Protestant church. He was leaving that church now and uniting with one which had no building, nor a foot of ground on which to build one.

Following the testimony service the ordinance of feet washing was held. We instructed them by word and example as most of them had never seen it performed before. All, thirteen in number, took part in the Lord's Supper which followed. Just the number that sat down at the last Passover supper of which we read in the Bible.

The next day, October 26, was the ninety-second anniversary of the arrival of the gospel to Aitutaki. This we prepared to celebrate. After sundown all our young men went to sea to fish for the feast which we had planned. They were successful, returning about midnight with an abundance. The next morning was spent in preparing food for the feast which was to be eaten at two o'clock. At twelve o'clock all was in readiness, and we gathered for our meeting. Our house was filled to overflowing, several outsiders coming in to the service. The gospel was made the theme of the discourse. All Scripture readings were recited by the young people who had previously memorized them for the occasion. Three native brethren also took part in the service, who spoke with freedom and some degree of oratory in exhorting all to stand by the pure gospel first delivered unto the saints.

Toward the close an offering was made toward our church building fund, in which both our own people and those not of our faith took part, the amount received being over £4. At 2.15 p.m. we gathered outside around tables spread under awnings which had been erected to shelter us from the sun. My wife and I felt sure that the immense amount of food would not be eaten, but after about forty natives had dined, nothing was left. It was thought very strange to have a feast with no pigs roasted whole, but all agreed that they had a good meal even though there was no pork.

At three o'clock singing of our favourite hymns in the native language began in the same place where the tables had so recently been spread. All took part in singing heartily for an hour and a half.

At about five o'clock we met and talked over the needs of requisites for the ordinances of the Lord's house. The brethren willingly subscribed the necessary money and paid it in immediately that we might order the things by the first steamer.

Thus closed a series of experiences which were enjoyed by all, and which will not soon be forgotten,—experiences which will help to unite our people here, giving them a common interest, and making them stronger to endure the taunts and insults which many on Aitutaki are freely bestowing upon those who have accepted the truth of God. A Week in Huahine, Society Islands

IN company with Pastor Lyndon and Urarii, our native worker, we boarded a schooner for a thirty-five-mile trip to the twin islands of Huahine. Arriving there in the evening, we made our way to our little church building, at which place we lived during our stay there.

We were very much surprised when reaching the church to find that some natives had taken possession of the place, and had turned it into a dwelling house, and also had their pigs tied to the banana trees at the back. Of course we could not sanction this, so explained to them the reverence we should have for the house of God. By the evening of the following day, all their belongings were out, and the place fairly clean and ready for Sabbath.

We visited our Sabbath-keepers, and arranged for three meetings on Sabbath and one on Sunday morning, and so were able to study with them along many lines pertaining to the third angel's message. We believe that the Spirit of the Lord worked upon their hearts, and it was very encouraging to hear their testimonies as to their desires for the future.

On the following Monday, we started on our tour around the smaller island. This had to be done on foot. Part of the way we had a narrow track, and the remainder we followed the beach. It was a new experience, but nevertheless very interesting. Finding that we would not complete our journey that day, as night was drawing on, we were obliged to hire a canoe to reach the next settlement. Reaching there about 8 p.m., we were met by a number of natives, among whom was the governor of the settlement, who at once invited Pastor Lyndon and myself to stay in their house over night. Urarii stayed with his relations.

It was somewhat amusing to see their hospitality towards us. At a very early hour the old governor was up preparing some food for our breakfast, and as for table knives, forks, etc., they had to be borrowed, one here and there, and to cover the table a sheet was used. These difficulties arise on account of the natives not using such things, as their food is always placed upon clean leaves and eaten off the floor, their fingers taking the place of spoons and forks, etc. Of course, they did their best, and we appreciated their kindness and offered to pay them for their trouble, but they would not hear of it, so we made them a present of the new book on Daniel, for which they seemed very pleased. They told us before leaving that their home was open to us at any time.

After bidding them all farewell we continued our journey on foot, calling at every house. About twelve o'clock we came to another large settlement where we found Urarii's brother, who is governor of that place. At his house we stayed for some time, and while talking together he roasted some fine breadfruit for us, which were very acceptable after about six hours of tramping. And, by the way, a traveller never needs to be thirsty in Huahine during the orange season, as the trees grow in abundance and are laden with lovely fruit.

Early in the afternoon we found ourselves back again at our little church building, and during the few remaining hours of that day we visited a number of people in the main settlement. We also sold Chinese papers, as there are a number of Chinese who keep shops in Huahine and other islands of this group.

While there we found two young men who seemed very anxious to know and understand the message. Pastor Lyndon had some very interesting talks with them, which we hope and pray will bring about a desire to walk in the light of the third angel's message.

Throughout our trip we were able to sell a number of the book "Daniela," and the little paper, Tiarama, was scattered freely among the people, who were very eager to receive it. The next day ended our pleasant stay in that island, as the schooner arrived to take us home again to Raiatea, where we arrived that evening.

We hope that you will not forget these people in your prayers, and we trust our feeble efforts are only the beginnings of better things for Huahine. W. R. Howse.

"Thank God for the man who is cheerful
In spite of life's troubles, I say;
Who sings of a brighter to-morrow
Because of the clouds of to-day.
His life is a beautiful sermon,
And this is the lesson to me—
Meet trials with smiles, and they vanish;
Face cares with a song and they flee."

The Church-school

Co-operation of Parents

In the management of the church-school, whether we consider the work of either teacher or school board, there is no stronger factor than that of the hearty, practical support of the parents. Under any system of education, the training of the child should be, primarily, of paramount importance to the parents, — subsequently, of course, to the child itself as recipient. Unfortunately, for reasons self-evident yet ever-present, education becomes irksome to the average child at some time in his school-life, and too often, the duty of instruction brings its maximum of burden upon the instructor alone, with a minimum of response from both pupil and parents. In such countries where primary education is compulsory, the authority and power of the state school permits the teacher to overcome the apathy of the parents in many cases; but, even here, it must be admitted, that better results are obtained where the co-operation of the parents is secured. A duty, higher than that exacted by the state, rests upon Christian parents to become personally interested in the education of the child. The following extracts from the Spirit of Prophecy clearly set forth this duty:

"Every child born into the home is a sacred trust. God says to the parents, 'Take this child, and bring it up for Me, that it may be an honour to My name, and a channel through which My blessings shall flow to the world.'"—"Special Testimonies on Education," page 36.

"As wise teachers, parents should labour earnestly for their children, leading them to co-operate with God. True Christian parents are teachers in the home. . . . Parents, will you remember that the education of your children, from the earliest years is committed to you as a sacred trust?" —From a Manuscript.

With these thoughts in mind, the writer would suggest the following simple ways in which parents may co-operate with the teacher:

(a) Early discipline in the home.

This suggestion is placed first for self-evident reasons. The proverb, "As the twig is bent, the tree is inclined," applies here. With good principles of self-government combined with a cheerful, Christian spirit, the parents will not only mould the life of the child, but the standard of the whole school will be set. "Even a child is known by its doings," and children sent from a home properly trained in such courtesy and obedience will consciously, as well as unconsciously, become an object lesson to the entire school. If such early training could be depended upon, no other suggestions need be offered.

(b) Take interest in the child's work.

This may be done by sometimes observing the written work required by the teacher, both inside and outside of the schoolroom. The thought of such inspection will dignify and encourage the child in its work. Regular and punctual attendance at school should also be observed. Few things are more disheartening to a teacher than to have pupils irregular and tardy in their attendance. Their work falls behind, and they lose that spirit which promotes success, and work becomes a burden. Parents should encourage and support the teacher in every effort to secure punctuality and regularity in attendance. Some parents take a narrow view of this part of school discipline, being satisfied when the child attends only a sufficient period to satisfy the legal demands of the State Education Act. Some parents, unfortunately, refuse to assist the teacher in providing a written explanation for delay and absence of their children. It would be well if such parents had some early demonstration of the fact that this should prove the child's safeguard.

(c) Avoid criticism of the teacher.

The following extract from "Testimonies for the Church," Vol. VI, page 202, upon the subject of criticism and its influence, should be carefully noted:

"Until the spirit of criticism and suspicion is banished from the heart, the Lord cannot do for the church that which He longs to for the establishment of schools. . . . There must be an entire transformation of mind and character. A spirit of disunion cherished in the hearts of a few will communicate itself to others, and undo the influence for good that would be exerted by the school. Unless parents are ready and anxious to co-operate for the salvation of their children, they are not prepared to have a school established among them."

In many instances parents may assist the school by manifesting sufficient grace to allow their children's faults to be pointed out and corrected without resentment. Very frequently, however, sympathy with the erring child is openly manifested, which, combined with unjust criticism, undermines the very bulwark of the teacher's authority.

(d) Visit the school occasionally.

Nothing brings greater confidence to the teacher and to the children, than to have the parents personally watch them at work. The parents, too, become acquainted with the teacher, and may henceforward be more sympathetic with his work. A few moments only, would suffice any wide-awake parent also, of the prevailing moral tone of the school.

(e) Attend "Parents' Meetings."

At specified times, meetings should be convened by the school board for parents and supporters of the church-school. These meetings, when properly conducted, should be of help to both teacher and parents. Advantage should not be taken of such occasions to find fault with the teacher or his work, but rather to explain or remove difficulties which may sometimes arise —as the conduct of children to and from school, the improvement of school buildings and grounds, the provision of better teaching facilities, and, in some instances, for the establishment of a small school library.

These suggestions may be added to, or varied, with profit; but, where some such plans for the welfare of the school are laid, progress is certain.

Mailing the Signs

SOME one is receiving a blessing in mailing the Signs of the Times to Scotland. And the one to whom the Signs is sent is receiving and passing on to others the blessing of the everlasting gospel, as shown by the following extract from a letter just to hand.

"The Signs of the Times are coming regularly, I find them very interesting and circulate them as fast as I get them to those who can appreciate them, for I have long entertained its views on the advent of Christ, and have sat up half of the night and more to study the subject many years ago. Realizing the truth of the near approach of Christ, and the 'blessed hope of His glorious appearing' should certainly lead to holiness of life."

"For every one that hath this hope in Him purifieth himself, even as He is pure."

To those who are unable to do personal house-to-house work, the mailing of papers and tracts affords an excellent opening for aggressive work.

The seed thus sown and followed by earnest prayer for the salvation of souls, will surely bring forth fruit which will remain to the glory of God.

A Message to Our Youth

DEAR youth, what is the aim and purpose of your life? Are you ambitious for education that you may have a name and position in the world? Have you thoughts that you dare not express, that you may one day stand upon the summit of intellectual greatness; that you may sit in deliberative and legislative councils, and help to enact laws for the nation? There is nothing wrong in these aspirations. You may every one of you make your mark. You should be content with no mean attainments. Aim high, and spare no pains to reach the standard.

Balanced by religious principle, you may climb to any height you please. We should be glad to see you rising to the noble elevation God designs that you shall reach. Jesus loves the precious youth; and He is not pleased to see them grow up with uncultivated, undeveloped talents. They may become strong men of firm principle, fitted to be entrusted with high responsibilities, and to this end they may lawfully strain every nerve.

The formation of a right character is the work of a lifetime, and is the outgrowth of prayerful meditation united with a grand purpose. The excellence of character that you possess must be the result of your own effort. Friends may encourage you, but they cannot do the work for you. Wishing, sighing, dreaming, will never make you great or good. You must climb. Gird up the loins of your mind, and go to work with all the strong powers of your will. It is the wise improvement of your opportunities, the cultivation of your God-given talents, that will make you men and women that can be approved of God, and a blessing to society. Let your standard be high, and with indomitable energy, make the most of your talents and opportunities, and press to the mark.

The true object of education should be carefully considered. God has entrusted to each one capacities and powers, that they may be returned to Him enlarged and improved. All His gifts are granted to us to be used to the utmost. He requires every one of us to cultivate our powers, and attain the highest possible capacity for usefulness, that we may do noble work for God and bless humanity.

I am glad we have institutions where our youth can be separated from the corrupting influences so prevalent in the schools of the present day. Our brethren and sisters should be thankful that in the providence of God our colleges have been established, and should stand ready to sustain them by their means. Every influence should be brought to bear to educate the youth and to elevate their morals. They should be trained to have moral courage to resist the tide of moral pollution in this degenerate age. With a firm hold upon divine power, they may stand in society to mould and fashion, rather than to be fashioned after the world's model.

Obituaries

PENGELLEY.—On November 15, Sister Keturah Pengelley, aged fifty-six years, fell asleep at her home in Kadina, South Australia. Sister Pengelley commenced to keep the Sabbath twenty years ago in obedience to the light she received from her own reading of the Word of God, and she has loyally obeyed the commandment of Jehovah since that time. Later, when the third angel's message was preached in this district, she was baptized into the full light of present truth by Pastor Woods. Many in this district have received a knowledge of the present truth by her faithful witnessing, and, as a result of her labours, the little church in which we meet every Sabbath was set up as a constant witness to the truth. There she officiated as organist for a long period of time. Six years before accepting the light for these days, she contracted a severe throat trouble, from which she suffered most patiently for twenty-six long years, and to this dread disease she finally succumbed. The closing day of her life was a Sabbath, on which day a devoted daughter watched anxiously, expecting every moment to be her last. She passed away peacefully at about 9 p.m., firm and true to the last to Him whom she loved to obey. She leaves her husband, mother, four daughters (two of whom are married), and one son to mourn their loss. They love to think of her as she will rise in the glad resurrection day, when pain and suffering will be no more, for we are assured that she will respond to the call of the Life-giver when He shall appear the second time without sin unto salvation.

L. THOMAS.

CARR.—Harold Patterson, infant son of Brother and Sister Harold E. Carr, of Atchin, New Hebrides, died October 6, and was buried the same day. Though only eight months old, his death has created a great void in the hearts of his parents. Together with them we bow our heads in sorrow, and say, "Not my will but Thine, be done." "The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord." How comforting the words, "Thus saith the Lord; Refrain thy voice from weeping, and thine eyes from tears: for thy work shall be rewarded, saith the Lord; and they shall come again from the land of the enemy. And there is hope in thine end, saith the Lord, that thy children shall come again to their own border." Jer. 31: 16, 17.

BROTHER and Sister Carswell did not get off to New Zealand on November 22 as recorded last week, as their boat, the Maheno, was delayed by the strike until Thursday, November 27.

ON Sunday, November 9, a Sabbath-school convention was held on Norfolk Island. Several interesting and instructive papers were read. Those in attendance were greatly benefited by the instruction given, and resolved by God's help to raise the standard of work in their Sabbath-school.

BROTHER S. V. STRATFORD, who has for years been connected with the work in the Union Conference office, has left for Victoria, where he will, in harmony with a recommendation of the Union Conference Council, enter upon his work as secretary and treasurer of the Victoria-Tasmania Conference. Brother Stratford has rendered faithful and efficient service in this office, and our best wishes attend him.

ON his arrival at Fiji, Pastor Butz had to go into quarantine with the ship's company. There he had good spiritual talks with some of his associates, distributed some literature, and held a service one Sunday evening. Pastor Butz was privileged to visit our Indian Mission in charge of Sister Meyers, and our Buresala Training School. He speaks very favourably of the work being done in these places, and found the workers of good courage.

DR. HORACE WILLIAMS and wife, while on their way from America to their field of labour in South Africa, called at Sydney and Melbourne. While in Sydney on November 25 and 26, they stopped at the sanitarium. It was a privilege to us to make the acquaintance of these workers, and they esteemed it a privilege to see something of the work in this field. Dr. Williams has been connected with our medical work in Cape Town for a number of years, and has recently spent some time in America doing some postgraduate work.

IN writing from our Monamona Mission, North Queensland, Brother Rudge says: "You will be interested to know that we have moved into our new mission house, though it has no doors or windows yet. We received a wire to-day (November 10), stating that two married native couples from Barambah would arrive at Cairns to-morrow. We have also had an offer from the government of two half-caste women and eight children which we have accepted. We want all the children we can keep, as we consider them the most promising."

BROTHER H. E. CARR gave an encouraging report of the work in the New Hebrides at the Wahroonga missionary meeting on Wednesday evening, November 26. The condition of the natives there is pitiful indeed. The manners and customs of these natives show that they are still in the darkest of heathenism. Our workers have found it necessary to work cautiously in order to avoid opposition from other missionaries. More workers are needed that the truth may find its way to the hearts of those who are in such darkness.

WE are glad to report the success of some of our young people with Life and Health. A few days ago Miss Mabel Reekie and Miss Winnie Hosking sold six dozen copies in a day and a half in a suburb of Newcastle. Encouraged by their success two others decided to engage in this work. In a few hours the four disposed of ninety-nine copies. Still another is joining them, and on behalf of the five an order has been received for fifteen dozen copies of the Holiday Number, also one dozen copies of the "Good Health Cookery Book."

"IF you want to be gloomy, there's gloom enough to keep you glum. If you want to be glad, there's gleam enough to keep you glad."

The Australasian Missionary College

THE first term of the eighteenth school year will commence January 14, 1914.

The demand for educated workers was never so great as it is to-day. In order to meet this demand the college is prepared to educate young people for office work, for canvassing, for Bible work, for missionary work, for the sanitarium nurses' course, and for the ministry.

Although the cost of living has risen abnormally, yet the college rates are practically the same, or a little less. Eighteen shillings and sixpence per week, and ten hours work, provides for board (two meals a day), lodging, tuition, and washing, and the use of well-appointed halls and parlours. Or for ten shillings a week and thirty hours' work the same privileges can be had.

There is also room for strong consecrated young people who are not able to pay anything, but are willing to work their way through college. Never did an institution offer better inducements than these.

Young students are urged to take the regular college course, but those of mature years are advised by the faculty as to the subjects they should take, on the completion of which they are granted certificates stating the subjects completed, and recommending them to the work.

"The Lord is not pleased with those who, having had opportunities to obtain knowledge, neglect to improve the privileges placed within their reach."—"Counsels to Teachers," page 510.

"Young men and women who should be engaged in the ministry, in Bible work, and in the canvassing work, should not be bound down to mechanical employment."—"Counsels to Teachers," page 494.

"The Lord calls upon our youth to enter our schools, and quickly fit themselves for active work. Time is short. Workers for Christ are needed everywhere. Urgent inducements should be held out to those who ought now to be engaged in earnest effort for the Master."—"Counsels to Teachers," page 493.

Write for a calendar or any information concerning the college.
