Getting to Heaven or Getting Heaven Into You

SOME people think the great aim and purpose of Christianity is to get them into heaven; whereas the truth is that Christianity is trying to get heaven into them. We believe in heaven: believe there is a material heaven, where God centrally dwells; believe that the saints will be taken to heaven; believe that heaven is a delightful place, the abode of love, joy, and peace; but yet we do not believe that the all-absorbing effort of the Christian is to get into that heaven and live happily ever after.

The fact is, that is just what Satan wants. Don't imagine for a moment that the devil doesn't want to be happy. He does, but in his own way, and he includes the desire of heaven in his scheme of happiness. Once he tried to take it by force, and failed. He still maintains he has a right there, the right, and that he will get there and have a happy time doing just as he pleases. A great many people whose names are on the church book, line up with him in this purpose, though they would indignantly repudiate any imputation of alliance. And a great many more people who are not church members follow along.

Lift up your heads, ye glittering gates,—
  E'en lift them up, ye doors of pearl;
The risen King of glory waits;
  Let heaven's banners wide unfurl!
Then voices cry, e'en like a roaring sea,
'Who can this King—this King of glory be?"

Then from the bright angelic throng,
  'Till heaven's myriad arches ring,
The glorious word is borne along,
  "The Lord of hosts! He is the King."
"Who can this King,—this mighty Conqueror be?"
"The Eternal Prince of heaven! 'tis He, 'tis He."

Lift up your gates, ye glittering bars!
  What glorious honours you may win!
And brighter shine, ye heavenly stars,
  And let the King of glory in!
Ye everlasting portals,—open wide,
And bid the risen King triumphant ride.

Asunder, 'mid a mighty shout,
  The massive, glittering portals rolled,
And hallelujahs glad rang out
  As opened wide each gate of gold;
Then with the mighty millions tried and true,
The conquering King of glory entered through.

Peace of Mind

For just what is this universal desire of heaven? Universal it is, whatever the conception of the heaven. It may be an apocalyptic heaven, with jasper walls and pearly gates and golden streets and a tree of life; or it may be just a common Bolshevik heaven, with a minimum of work and a maximum of pay, where food grows itself and nobody is the boss. It may be the churchman's kingdom of God on earth, where congregations ne'er break up and Sabbaths have no end; or it may be the Buddhist's extreme of content in dreamless Nirvana. No matter what the specifications, they make the ideal of somebody who wants his heaven.

In reality the desire for heaven is a desire for peace of mind. And it depends on what you think will give you peace of mind, what your conception of heaven is. If you believe, as so many do, that money will do away with your troubles, then you are for getting money, and any scheme of government or society that will promise you wealth and consequent leisure and gratification of appetites is the heaven you seek.

You'll Never Get There

If you believe, as so many others do, that surcease of sorrow is being in heaven,—sunshine, happy songs, nobody crossing your will,—then you are all for sliding along through life without any trouble. You may be a professing Christian, but you are not the kind that keeps the Sabbath while the world breaks it, or that gets up in the middle of the night to help a neighbour with a sick cow, or that eats a little less to save for the starving. Why, no! heaven was made for you, not the other one, and of course if any of its benefits come along, you are going to have them.

This exclusive sort of heaven is always in the clouds, just beyond reach. For nobody yet has found money to be the root of all good, and nobody yet has floated into Paradise on the cushions of a Pullman car. And every one who has travelled the route of avarice and ease has waked up sooner or later to the fact that the world is in his heart, and not heaven. It matters not whether you are seeking heaven through the church or through the counting room: If your heaven is a place where you are the chief consideration, you will never get there, neither in this life nor in the life to come.

Why? Because selfishness is in your heart; and selfishness kills heaven. Heaven is peace; it is being in tune with God. It is primarily not a place, but a state. The state of heaven makes the place of heaven; without the state of heaven, there is hell.

Now the blessed thing about heaven is that you do not have to go to it; it comes to you. To certain who sought to gratify themselves with the delights of heaven, Jesus said: "The kingdom of God cometh not with observation ["outward show," margin]: . . . for, behold, the kingdom of God is within you." Luke 17:20, 21. The kingdom of God, heaven, is no other than the presence of God. Within us, it is the life of our Lord Jesus Christ. To receive Him is to receive heaven; and henceforth we walk in heaven, we have the peace of heaven, and we do the deeds of heaven.

Heaven is a state of unselfish, happy, persistent ministry of good to God and to our fellow men. With heaven comes the vanishing of sin and of selfishness from our hearts. With that gone, there is peace, a peace that passes all understanding, that cannot be bought with all the gold of the world nor coaxed with all its blandishments. It is not a state of luxuriousness: it is a state of hard-fibred activity. It knows no self-indulgence; but in its unwearying service it begets a deeper joy.

Heaven to Be Universal

There is coming a time, and coming soon, when there will not be anything in the universe but heaven. Evil destroys itself; it decays in its own darkness, and it shrivels in the light of God. On that great day when "death shall be no more; neither shall there be mourning, nor crying, nor pain," in that day, "behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and He shall dwell with them, and they shall be His people, and God Himself shall be with them and be their God." Rev. 21:4, 3, R.V.

But in that day what makes a universal heaven is the gathering together of all those with whom God dwells, and the complete elimination of all those who have refused to have God dwell in them. The perfect creation about them is merely an accessory, or, rather, it is a result of that heaven which dwells in God and in them. We may as truly have heaven with us now as then, though all about us there may be the antithesis of heaven. And in the end heaven will cover all.

The Christian life is not a matter of getting to heaven; it is a matter of getting heaven. And it is gotten thus: "Let the same disposition be in you which was in Christ Jesus. Although from the beginning He had the nature of God He did not reckon His equality with God a treasure to be tightly grasped. Nay, He stripped Himself of His glory, and took on Him the nature of a bondservant by becoming a man like other men. And being recognised as truly human, He humbled Himself and even stooped to die." Phil. 2:5-8, Weymouth's translation.

They who enter the society of the Man of Galilee, and who count not heaven a treasure to be grasped, but who, stripping themselves of their vainglory, become as bondservants to the needs of their fellow men, even to the point of giving their lives to that end, they receive heaven.

Doubt not, friends, that there is a real and tangible heaven, a heaven the things of which our eyes shall see, our ears hear, and our hands handle. But it is given only to them who find the heaven of this present life through companionship with Jesus Christ in self-forgetfulness, and love, and ministry. And in the day when it shall be seen that "God also hath highly exalted Him, and given Him a name which is above every name: that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow" (verses 9, 10,) then shall they also who have thought and wrought with Him in His humility be partakers in His joy at the triumph of good.

OUR MISSION FIELD

Prison Work in Tonga

RATHER an encouraging experience has been ours of late, so we pass it on to the RECORD readers. It will show how seed sown often bears fruit in unexpected ways.

A very earnest new Tongan brother in our Nukualofa church has been visiting the prisoners in the local gaol and talking with them in his spare time, as he works in the Government workshop next door to the prison.

A few weeks ago a request came to us for the European worker visiting Nukualofa on the Sabbath, to hold Bible studies with the offenders of the law. We went that same Sabbath and found one very earnest young man to be the leader in spiritual things, doing his best to have Sabbath service.

With the permission of the authorities, we held our service at 2 p.m. that day, and have continued every Sabbath since.

The young man's story is interesting. His name is Fukafuka, which means flag-flag, and he is proving to be a good leader among his associates. He has two note books; in one he wants the verses of our studies, so they can review these during the week, and in the other he wishes us to write little notes, such as anecdotes with a spiritual lesson.

At first only prison New Testaments were seen at the meetings, but now several complete Bibles are in evidence as they find we read from the Old as well as the New Testament. At first only prisoners came, but now the warders with their wives and families attend. It is not a large gathering, but it is an interesting one.

Last Sabbath Fuka asked us to close the meeting with a season of prayer. Afterward he told me that one who prayed was a Roman Catholic, and that it was his first service with us. We have noticed that the fellow prisoners respect this boy, so his earnestness is no doubt genuine.

A Prisoner Relates His Own Story

Fuka's story is as follows:

"I attended the Seventh-day Adventist school at Houma" (our old mission site) "for a few months, but did not give up smoking. Mr. Thorpe often used to talk to me, and when he left Tonga, he told me that perhaps some trouble would bring me to my senses.

"For about a year and a half I did as I pleased. I did not believe there was a God. My mates often appealed to me about this, but I defied them. My father pleaded with me, but to no avail. My friends asked me to read the Bible, but I would not.

"Then I committed an offence for which I am here, and I have eighteen months yet to serve. When I became a prisoner, my father said to me, 'Now how about your defiance of God and right?' I replied, 'I have nothing to say.' Since coming to prison I have had a long illness, and after a time a lady missionary visited us and I talked to her. I began to be enlightened and to read the Bible. Then Kaseti" (Gazette, our new believer before mentioned) "visited me, and I asked that you people come to help us spiritually.

"We feel that Christ is our only hope, and we know that we are sinners. I still smoke, but am trying hard to give it up." (We believe the Lord will give him the victory.) "We feel that your studies help us a great deal, and we want to write them down so that we can go over them again. We are happy for the help you are giving us."

We have watched this interest for several weeks, and believe it is the work of the Spirit of God. Remember these earnest inquirers and our work in Tonga in your prayers.

Coastal Visiting, Papua

WHILE returning to Vilirupu from Port Moresby by launch late in January, as we experienced heavy wind we sheltered over the week-end at a village that has no missionary or teacher. The people joined us in two Sabbath meetings, and in company with Micah we visited three villages inland and had an interesting time. These people have no knowledge of God at all, and showed considerable interest in what we told them. On the Sunday we slept at a big village farther along the coast. Towards evening the people began to gather around us, asking intelligent questions that led to a very interesting meeting.

These experiences made me anxious to visit the thousands of people on the coast within walking distance of the Vilirupu mission (about twelve miles). The result of our first visit was sufficiently encouraging to lead us to promise to go and hold meetings and day school on the property we have in this district, known as Aroma. Two leaf houses, erected by a deceased trader, provide the necessary accommodation for a small beginning, and we are glad to report a growing interest already. For the present we spend three and a half days at each place, but this new district will call for more attention than that soon, judging by the growing interest in our work.

A Perilous Predicament

On our third visit we walked along the coast, and at one of the large alligator-infested rivers we had a miraculous escape from a perilous predicament. We secured a canoe in which to cross the river. It had just grown dark as we embarked. About half way across, the waves from the mouth of the river upset the canoe, and we were instantly struggling in the water, surrounded with the baggage of travel. Some boys climbed up on the bottom of the canoe. I took some things near me, and swam shorewards. It took much longer than I expected, and every minute was filled with terror of the cruel alligators, especially at that hour of the day. The boys got ashore safely; one swam ahead of me, urging and encouraging me, well aware of the perilous situation. They told me one boy was left clinging to the canoe, as he could not swim. There was only one thing to do—get another canoe: but where?

Providentially, the canoe we sorely needed was about two hundred yards away. I urged them to make all speed, while I prayed and called, in turns, to encourage the boy out there in the darkness who was now out in the sea. His voice became a faint cry, but the rescuers bent silently to the paddles, and he was saved. We kneeled around the canoe and offered praise, not only for sparing our lives, but also that our goods were reclaimed. We lost nothing except what the water had spoiled by wetting. The reward of the effort to reach here has been to spend four days holding meetings, teaching, and answering the many questions of the people from morning till night.

To-night I have a box for a table, and a sheet around my legs to keep the mosquitoes away, as I make this effort to write. I shall be glad to return to Vilirupu to-morrow, as my bread was spoiled in the river and I am on a plain and not overplentiful diet.

Teaching by Our Lives

WE are all teachers, and our school is larger than many of us have thought. We are teaching more individuals in that school than many of us will be willing to give account for in the day of judgment.—Selected.

HOME and HEALTH

How to Get on With Disagreeable People

SOONER or later, I suppose, it falls to the lot of all of us to live, for a longer or shorter period, with a disagreeable person. Not that they are really disagreeable in themselves, perhaps they may be even attractive and lovable to some people; but to us, on account of their temperament and tastes differing so widely from ours, they appear difficult to get on with.

It is very important to learn the divine art of living with uncongenial people; for to be continually "rubbed the wrong way," to daily meet with jars and friction, will slowly but surely wear away our very life. Our health and our spirit will gradually disappear, yes, and it is to be feared, alas! our grace also.

Going through life, I have learned some valuable lessons that have helped me to bear patiently with disagreeable people, when it has been my lot to meet with them.

The first is this: if you find some one trying and hard to live with, you may be almost certain that he also finds things about you that are irritating to him.

I remember that when, as a child, I confided to a mutual friend how difficult I found it to get on with a companion, I was more than surprised when she quietly remarked, "She says that you are so very trying sometimes." I had never dreamed that I had been in the least to blame! And as the years have rolled by since then, I have noticed again and again that, if there is friction, it is almost invariably felt on both sides. How often it has helped me to be patient, if some one has rubbed me the wrong way, to say to myself: "No doubt, although I am not conscious of doing or saying anything wrong, I am trying her as much as she is trying me."

Another useful lesson experience has taught me is, that, if persons are irritable and cross and difficult to please, very often the reason is because they are suffering (all unknown perhaps to those around them) in mind or body; and, if we only knew all their pain, we should feel it was pity instead of blame they deserved.

A third lesson I have learned in some measure is, if people are disagreeable, to make allowances for their natural disposition, and not to expect the same sympathy and consideration from those who are not naturally sensitive and tender-hearted, as from those who are. The former cannot be expected to know what a little thing will hurt the latter.

I have noticed on different occasions, when some one who had been born, as it were, without sympathy or tact, said what seemed to be an unpleasant or cutting thing, it was not that he meant to be unkind or to wound; it was simply because he had the misfortune to have a bad manner and to possess no natural tact. If we are different from such, let us thank God for it, and say to ourselves: "Who maketh thee to differ from another? and what hast thou that thou didst not receive?"

Mrs. Charles beautifully expressed what I am trying to say when she wrote: "How many of our resentments would die out by simply realising that the deeds or words or omissions which wound us were not meant, or that, if indeed they were meant, they arose from a difference of character, or a want of imagination, which prevented the perception of how they would pain!"

But though the three lessons we have mentioned are very useful and precious, they do not go deep enough. If we are to get to the root of the matter, we must learn a more spiritual truth; namely, that our relations with our fellow men largely depend upon our relations with God, that we can truly keep in touch with those we live with only by keeping in touch with God.

This is the most important fact for us to learn, that we keep right with men when we keep right with God.

How searching are Pastor Stockmayer's words: "When nothing comes between us and God, there will be nothing coming between us and our brethren." The smallest friction with our friend, our neighbour, or our fellow worker, ought to be an alarm call to awaken us to the fact that all is not right between our soul and God. If we are finding it difficult to "let our yieldingness be known unto all men," the reason is that we are not sufficiently yielded to God.

One who has had large and long experience in dealing with Christian workers says: "The soul that is filled with the Holy Spirit is adjustable both to God and man. The easiest people to get along with are those most filled with God." If, then, we have not learned to get on with disagreeable people, and cannot yet bear and forbear, we may question if we know what it is to be filled with the Spirit.—The Life of Faith.

A Life of Victory

THE Lord blessed Isaac, "and the man waxed great, and went forward, and grew until he became very great: . . . and the Philistines envied him." The wells which his father Abraham had digged, "the Philistines had stopped them, and filled them with earth. And Abimelech said unto Isaac, Go from us." For the flocks and herds, and the "great store of servants," water was essential, so "Isaac digged again the wells of water, which they had digged in the days of Abraham his father; . . . and Isaac's servants digged in the valley, and found there a well of springing water. And the herdmen of Gerar did strive with Isaac's herdmen, saying, The water is ours."

Isaac here manifested the spirit of his father Abraham, who when a strife arose between his herdmen and those of Lot, said, Let there be no strife between us; the whole land is before us; take your choice. If you turn to the right hand, I will turn to the left; and if you turn to the left hand, I will turn to the right. So

Isaac turned away from the well of strife and contention, and digged another well, and they "strove for that also." Again he turned away, leaving the well to those who contended for it. "He removed from thence, and digged another well; and for that," we are told, "they strove not."

"The Lord appeared unto him the same night, and said, I am the God of Abraham thy father; fear not, for I am with thee, and will bless thee."

To give in, as did Isaac, and surrender his rights, seemed like a humiliating defeat; but it was not so in fact. The spirit Isaac manifested, so different from what was customary, made an impression upon Abimelech and his men, for Abimelech (the man who had said to him, "Go from us") now came to him to beg his pardon, and to right the wrongs he had done. "Isaac said unto them, Wherefore come ye to me, seeing ye hate me, and have sent me away from you? And they said, We saw certainly that the Lord was with thee." Gen. 26:13-28. That which appeared to be a defeat was in fact a great victory. In this narrative we have the secret of the victorious life.

The Little Things

Lord, give us strength to bear the little things,
The fancied slurs, the slights that mar the day,
The dancing shadows down the sunlit way,—
Lord, give us strength to bear the little things.

Lord, give us strength to bear the little things:
When dark hours come, when fear would grip the heart,
Lo, Thou art near, of our own lives a part;
But we need strength to bear the little things!

Lord, give us strength to bear the little things:
Teach us to rise above each petty wrong,
To give our foes a smile, and life a song,
To bear with grace and cheer the little things!

Sweetness and Suffering

THERE are certain fragrant trees which bathe in perfume the axe that cuts into their wood. So it was with the life of Jesus. Wrong or injury done to Him only drew out more tenderness, sweeter love. We have a remarkable example of this in the very moment of crucifixion. It was when the nails were being driven through His hands and feet that He prayed, "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do."—J. R. Miller.

Appeal Notes

We Make Friends in Appeal Work

LAST year when calling upon the medical and business men of the city, we met some who were not altogether friendly and who gave their support rather unwillingly. This spirit was very noticeably manifested by three or four business men in Hobart, so much so, that when we came to face the work this year our weak flesh hesitated before going to make the call. After gathering enough courage our collectors went forward, only to be greeted with a cheery smile, warm handshake, and the "usual donation."

An Interested Case Met in the Work

In almost every district some interested folk were met. The names of these friends have been secured and papers will be posted to them. While visiting some of the more interested ones, we enjoyed telling them of the message we love and the promise of Christ's early return. Very intelligent questions were asked relative to the Sabbath of God and other points of doctrine.

While visiting in the far north-western part of the State, Brother F. J. Butler called upon a gentleman who two years ago gave us £5 for foreign mission work. A local collector called upon him this year, but he said he was not able to help. When Brother Butler called he emphasised the fact that times were altogether too bad to think of helping this year. This led to a talk on the reasons for the present conditions, and the only solution for the problem. He then stated that he was getting on in years, and felt that he had no assurance for the future, adding, "I have made a success, but what is it all worth, if a man gain the whole world and lose his soul?" For over an hour the conversation continued, and during that time this man was led to see the necessity of more faith in Christ and of looking to Him for help for both spiritual and temporal needs. At the close of the talk the gentleman arose saying, "You have enlightened me on some things, and I am very happy to have had this talk. I will give you something for your work." Stepping across to his safe, he drew out a £5 note which he handed to Brother Butler, saying that he was glad to be able to support such a good work, and that he was very thankful for the assurance the message had put in his heart.

Space prevents us from telling of other interested folk met this year.

God's Leading

We would acknowledge our indebtedness to the God of heaven for His leading in the work. We found that when we prayed over our work very sincerely, the Lord set His hand to guide us for the day. While out with some of the local collectors in the north, definite impressions were made upon our minds as to where we should go; and when we followed these impressions we found the Lord had given them. Two experiences may interest readers.

Late one evening we called upon a good lady, and addressing her by name, apologised for not visiting her last year, and invited her to help this year. Before the canvass was completed she said, "Oh, yes, I will give you something." Returning a few minutes later she held out a twenty shilling postal note, saying, "This is ten shillings for last year and ten shillings for this."

"At another time we called upon a man who had not been canvassed before, so far as we know. After the appeal was made, he invited us to his home in order to give us some help. When we had been introduced to his family, his wife asked to what denomination we belonged, and when it was known that we were Seventh-day Adventists he said he could not help us at all. A further talk about our mission work, however, softened his heart, and we left carrying with us his ten-shilling donation and leaving a promise that we would be back to see him next year.

As the money collected is passed on to the Union Conference treasurer it is followed with a sincere prayer that it may be used wisely, and that it will accomplish all that God would have it do.

We now turn our attention to other important features of conference work awaiting our attention, not forgetting, however, some corners of our field which we intend working as opportunity presents itself, so that our overflow will be as large as we can make it this year.

The Appeal for Missions has not occupied a very long time in this field, but it has taken longer than we think it should. If God sees fit to use us in this work next year, with the lessons learned this season before us, we expect to get through in shorter time. We take this opportunity of expressing our confidence in the Appeal for Missions as a means of raising money for the foreign mission work, and we also express our appreciation for help given by our conference workers and willing church members.

Brethren and sisters, the message is onward, let us swing in with the march and go through triumphantly when the last battle has been fought.

Know That You Are Saved

THE Bible teaches that a man may know that he is saved. Not by ecstatic joy necessarily. Not because he wants to shout all the time,—but no one should object to that in its place. Not because he is immediately conscious of a change of feeling. But because he believes God's Word.

Some of my hearers own the house they live in. How do you know you own it? By rubbing your hands against its walls? By carrying a little piece of it around in your pocket? No, but because you have the deed of it recorded in the town hall or the office of the registrar.

It is so that a man knows that he is saved. "These things are written," says the apostle John, "that ye may believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, and that believing ye may have life in His name."—Dr. J. M. Gray.

EDUCATIONAL

A. M. College Ingathering

THE College Appeal for Missions' goal of £350 has been exceeded by £50. The campaign that all felt would require faithful effort and earnest prayer above the campaigns of other years has ended in a shout of victory. The appalling conditions in the coal fields and the consequent depression throughout the north of the State have not been reflected in a poor response to the Appeal, for God's work goes on regardless of circumstances. And happy is the people whom God uses.

For one week the school of books gave place to the school of experience. In preparation, members of the country bands could be seen applying all their knowledge of the mechanics of a bicycle to machines that would transport them many miles. Rally meetings were held and enthusiasm ran high. Simple methods of arousing sympathy toward our work were explained and practised, and it was demonstrated how to convert this sympathy into the form that could be expressed in figures on a collecting card. In these happy preparations could be caught the spirit that makes Avondale an inspiration.

City and suburban bands were organised for daily onsets upon Newcastle and its environs. The work of these bands, though Herculean, was attempted with smiling confidence, and though distress was apparent on all sides, success was attained. Business men became personally responsible for donations that could no longer come from their failing business houses. But better than any financial success were the contacts made with world-bewildered men who earnestly desired to understand the conditions they were facing. No! Ingathering did not end with the close of this one week, for such souls may yet be gleaned. It was discovered that the name Seventh-day Adventist seemed to bear a charm, and ensured a welcome everywhere. A general appreciation of our missions programme showed itself in a confidence in the individual collector that was refreshing.

The words, "Best of all, God is with us," proved an appropriate keynote for the Friday evening service at the close of the week. Experiences were related that abundantly show that God's hand has been over us for good. A whole-hearted consecration was made to Him who is quickly finishing His work in the world.

Harvest Ingathering at N. Z. Missionary School

HARVEST Ingathering! What thoughts these words call forth! Our studies are laid aside for a whole week, and during that time every student has a wonderful opportunity of doing some active missionary work for the Lord of the harvest. To the consecrated young person, all his hopes for service are at last realised. Counting it a joy that the Master has given us a definite work to do, we take our place as brave soldiers, ready to stand the test of what may await us.

It was at the close of this eventful week, as we sat anxiously in the chapel, that a number of our young people related their experiences.

Brother C. S. Palmer was present on this occasion, and he impressed upon us the purpose of our M. V. Societies, and the great necessity of missionary service. Those who were unable to take part in the actual Appeal work were encouraged by the text found in 1 Samuel 30:24: "For who will hearken unto you in this matter? but as his part is that goeth down to the battle, so shall his part be that tarrieth by the stuff: they shall part alike." So every one was deeply interested in the experiences that followed. From these we learnt that folk are beginning to appreciate the work we are doing in the foreign fields. A little opposition was met, as can be expected; but many people look forward to our students' annual visit.

Our territory ranged from Raetihi to Wellington, and from Wanganui to Pongaroa. This is a large area, and our means of travel varied from bicycles and trains, to our school 'bus which must be commended for its good efforts.

In the dining room was placed our goal device, and every night how anxiously we watched for the windows to appear which we certainly hope will be the means of bringing light to some poor benighted souls. We are glad to state that our aim of £200 was reached, with an overflow of £10.

Each young person, I am sure, put forth his best effort, and we trust that some day the seed sown will bring forth fruit for that harvest which is almost ripe.

And now as we settle down to our studies again, feeling that we have done our duty, we trust that, if it is God's will, He will again give us an opportune time to put our hands to the plough. May God bless our humble work for Him, and hasten that day when we shall be gathered in the harvest home above.

DOROTHY EARLE.

Opportunity

OPPORTUNITY! opportunity! Daily some are saved by improving opportunity; daily some are lost by permitting opportunity to slip by unimproved!

One watched, he seized, clung to, and won;
The Saviour called, the work is done.
Another dreamed; he heeded not the call;
The day slipped by, and he lost all.

"Brethren, Pray for Us"

A Colporteur's Appeal

ONLY four words, but they mean so much to the colporteur. If, when he is going from door to door, he could know that his brethren were praying for him, what a help it would be! If each colporteur would pray for the other colporteurs, what mighty works could be wrought! I remember at one institute somebody suggested that we pray for each other, say at twelve o'clock each day. Could we not do this?

What a wonderful time we had at the past institute! What a feast of good things! Pastor A. W. Anderson's solemn admonition based on the watchman of Ezekiel 33 was most timely. Pastor W. T. Bartlett's study on "Personality," too, was a wonderful help, and space will not permit to mention the counsel given by our good brethren, Pastors Dorland, Meredith, and L. H. Wood.

Now the colporteurs are back in the field. I am having a hard time this week. I am in a farming district, and the British farmers are certainly hard hit. I have toiled hard and have caught very little. What is the matter with me? I take time to consider. I examine myself. I remember the text chosen by Pastor Maxwell at the farewell service, "Let us go on." In spite of everything, "let us go on." I have been relying too much on my own resources. "Unto Thee will I lift up mine eyes." Ps. 123:1. The answer comes, "Why are ye fearful, O ye of little faith?" Matt. 8:26. "Commit thy way unto the Lord. Trust also in Him." Ps. 37:5.

I make another march forward. I stand in the presence of a titled lady, and before very long the Stanborough Press is able to add one more name to its list of notable persons possessing a copy of "Bible Readings." Now I am talking to a cottager with an income of twenty-nine shillings per week. She would like my book, but not before March 3.

I have still but little to show for my week's work. Here is the clergyman of the parish; he must have the truth. He offers me a chair in his study, but it is not long before he is trying to persuade me to give up my book. It is too simple for the people. What they need to-day, he tells me, is a Bible founded on modern science, with the story of Creation and the Flood cut out. I remonstrate in vain and pass on.

The rector of the next village gives me a very different reception. He is extremely High Church, but he readily agrees to have a copy of the book. "You have a very strong point there on the marriage question," he says, "and that appeals to me. I admire your courage. We want more people to go about like you, people who will preach the gospel of Jesus. I will remember you in my prayers." I go on into the village and find the rector's name a great help.

Now it is time to be moving homewards, for the Sabbath is approaching. I review my work. Friday has been the best day of all the week. "Great and marvellous are Thy works, Lord God Almighty!"

But what if I had stayed at home on that Friday? For, after all, it was snowing hard all the day!

Such are the experiences we meet with week by week and month by month. We need your prayers. Pray for us.

Appeal for Missions in Tasmania

WE have come to the time when we can take a retrospective glance at our 1930 Appeal for Missions, and as we do so we thank God that He gave us the privilege of having a part in this splendid work. Although we found the work harder this year than other years, the people were very friendly and in most cases pleased to see us again.

In my work I have made a study of certain helps, and for the benefit of those who have not completed their work I pass them on.

First, I find it pays to go over the same territory each year. The people get to know you and it makes the work ever so much easier. Many times I did not have to canvass our friends, but merely made reference to the good work, thanked them for their past help, and invited them to give again. In almost every case the donation was freely made.

Secondly, I find the previous year's cards are a great asset, and I always carry these where I can get them. To call at a house and show the name alongside the amount given the year before goes a very long way toward securing further support. Our church members have not been instructed to make as much use of their cards as they should. In Tasmania we are watching this feature very closely.

My third valuable help was the photographs sent out from the Union Conference Home Missions Department. Somehow these do make the Appeal more impressive, and a donation was usually more easy to secure with this help.

Another successful method I have followed for some time is to be very liberal in my thanks for what the people have done in the past, and then tell them how much we need their continued support. This is very helpful in securing further support.

Assisting the Poor of Sydney

THE first quarter of 1930 has seen a smaller amount of help given from our depot in Redfern, because of financial stringency. Not in the way of clothing, however, but in cash assistance and in food has the decrease been noticed.

The difficulty of obtaining cash for our work has increased as the need of giving help has increased; because so many are assisting unemployed friends, as well as local charities. However, over £43 has been spent during the quarter, a number of new families having received help.

Over 660 articles of clothing have been given out to thirty families, and these garments are valued, at a conservative estimate, at over £50. For the kind help of our own people in supplying clothing, as well as to the public generally, we are very grateful. The faithfulness of a number of our church members in giving cash assistance has also enabled us to continue the work.

Some of the people have a desperate fight against sickness and unemployment, especially now that work is so hard to obtain. We have appreciated very much the assistance given by Cereal Foods, Ltd., as well as the kind help sent from our wholesale depot in Sussex Street and from the Weet Bix factory. These have been our principal sources of supply, with some gifts of fruit from Wahroonga members. May the blessing of Psalm 41:1-3 be on all the donors of food and clothing, and may the Lord prosper all so that a greater work may be accomplished.

We were rather grieved recently when our supply of wheat-flakes had run out, to have six or seven women with their little ones come along to get a supply. They depend largely on these flakes and biscuits to feed their children. We have since received further supplies and promises of more.

A Bible study is usually held once a week with those who come for assistance, and the tokens of the soon coming of our Lord, and the preparation necessary for that great event, are presented to the people. Some are reading the Signs with interest, and we trust that our good missionary paper will do its part in transforming character so that some of these dear souls may meet the Lord in peace. Will you, kind readers, join us in prayer that so it may be?

W. R. CARSWELL.

A FARMER had a weather-vane made for use on his barn, in which were wrought the words, "God is love." Some one said to him, "You have placed an immutable truth on a changeable thing." "Well, sir," replied the man, "I want you to understand that that means God is love whichever way the wind blows." There is more truth in that saying than in some sermons an hour long.—Selected.

WEDDING BELLS

Turner-Hollingsworth. On the evening of March 18, the strains of the wedding hymn were wafted down the valley from the little church in the hills, as the lives of Brother Jack Turner and Miss May Hollingsworth were united in marriage. Both these young people have been active members of the Bickley church for several years, and we wish them God's richest blessing as they make their home in Walliston. A. E. SPECK.

Corker-Chambers.—The wedding of Brother Edward Corker and Miss Ivy Chambers was solemnised in the Kulikup Hall on February 5. Many friends and relatives witnessed the ceremony and wished these young people a continuing manifestation of the blessing of God as they found another Christian home.

A. E. SPECK.

Thompson-Packham.—At the Erina church, N. S. W., on Sunday, February 23, Miss Elizabeth A. Packham and Brother William Thompson were united in holy wedlock, by the writer. The church was tastefully decorated for the occasion, and a large number of relatives and friends assembled to witness the ceremony. We offer them our best wishes and earnestly pray that the Lord will abundantly bless them as they walk the path of life together. May the influence of their lives be the means of winning others for the Master.

W. J. WESTERMAN.

WE have now completed the sixth week of our 1930 Appeal, and are glad to be able to report that three conferences have exceeded their aims. We have now nearly three-quarters of the Union aim.

North New Zealand did well to collect £209 this week, which carries them £65 beyond their goal. Tasmania has increased her overflow by another £13.

South New South Wales is now within £119 of the £2,800 goal. If they do as well next week as they did this, that conference will be flying the "victory flag."

North New South Wales has taken a big advance step this week, nearly doubling its total. Read on another page of how the A. M. College collected £400 in one week.

"If your heart's in the work, hold on, hold on;
Though the way should be gloomy and sad,
A light will appear, the pathway be clear,
And the heart of the worker be glad.
Hold on, hold on, my brother, hold on,
Hold on till the prize is won;
Hold on to the plough, and weary not now,
For the work is almost done."

PASTOR NICHOLSON wrote from Melbourne on April 9: "The Windsor church had collected £102 15s. up to last Sabbath, in the Appeal, leaving a balance of £28 still to collect. But we know of £8 not reported; and since there has been a good response this week, we hope to see this church reach its aim next week, if not this. Some of the church members have made a real sacrifice in their work. One sister who has an aged mother of eighty-eight years to care for, not only went out herself and collected £17, but assisted her mother to gather £4 17s. Though this aged member had to be assisted up even low steps, she persevered in the work. We visited her to-day, and she told us she is now waiting for an opportunity to collect another three shillings in order to reach her aim of £5. It is by such devotion on the part of our church membership who carry a burden for the mission field that faith is rewarded. We are enjoying our association with the Melbourne churches, and believe the Lord is blessing in the presentation of mission experiences."

Each square represents £25 of the Conference Goals. Each black square £25 or a major fraction thereof paid in.

RETURNING to Wahroonga from South Australia on April 17, Pastor W. N. Lock states that he is feeling fit and well, and ready for the mission field again. After spending a few days at the A. M. College, Brother Lock will sail for Papua by the the Morinda on April 29. He is leaving his family in South Australia until after the Union Conference session.

PASTOR A. W. ANDERSON, writing from London on March 10, says: "As soon as I have a little spare time I shall send something for the RECORD. My time is very fully occupied just now, and as I have only two months left to do my work in England I have to be very careful to use it only for very necessary things. I have sent some articles to the Signs of the Times. So far, the Lord has greatly blessed me in my research work in the British Museum, and I shall have very many things to relate to the good people on my return that will be a source of encouragement to them."

THE Fiji Times and Herald, in its personal column recently, gave a good recommendation of the Sydney Sanitarium. A clipping from the paper sent to us reads as follows: "Mr. Fred Hennings looks well, after his four and a half months treatment in New South Wales. He is pleased with the medical verdict that there is nothing wrong with him organically. He spent three months in the rare dry air of the Blue Mountains and the rest of the time in 'The Home of Health,' the wonderful sanitarium of the Seventh-day Adventists at Wahroonga, on the North Sydney line. Mr. Hennings received rigorous massage treatment there. He says the establishment is a wonderfully fine one."

FROM Lord Howe Island Sister A. H. Ferris wrote on April 9: "Two of our sons are home with us for a time. Norman has given three talks on the work in the Solomon Islands, and a number of tourists came to the meetings. They were so interested that they requested to hear more, and they all came again and others with them. At the close of the last meeting they came up to see the curios and one gentleman said to my husband: 'I have lived a good many years, but I never heard before of what is being done by your people for the islanders. I have been deeply impressed, and as I return to Australia I shall make it my business to tell others of what I have heard.' He continued, 'I think it is wonderful that heathen can be trained to become missionaries and leaders themselves.' Another man expressed himself thus: 'I have always said, "Leave the heathen alone, they are happier so," and I would never help missions; but after hearing these lectures I will never again say, "Let the heathen alone." I feel like helping such a work all I can.' Norman also gave a talk on the Thirteenth Sabbath, and we received £5 in the offering. That was good for this little island. Our total of £14 12s. for the quarter is very good, as many of our members have been away in Sydney, and those here have also been giving to our church building fund. We have built a new classroom and are making other improvements."

THIS paragraph regarding the interest of the young men connected with our new mission near Rabaul, we quote from Brother A. S. Atkins' letter of April 4: "We received the parcel of back numbers of the primary lesson pamphlets on doctrinal studies. These are just the thing for the boys, and they enjoy them very much. I divided them up among the older ones, and promised that I would write for more. The boys have been reading the Gospel of John for some time now, and are getting on well. Salau, our teacher from the Solomon Islands, tells me that his boys always take their books when they go into the bush to work. When they have a chance, they read them and ask him questions all the time. It is the same with the boys here at Matupi; they read every night until a late hour. So they are encouraged by having the lesson pamphlets to study. It is a great asset if they can master a little English. . . . We have asked for a supply of Appeal magazines, and hope to do our share in this part of the field."

The South Australian Camp-Meeting

MARCH 20 was the opening date of one of the best camp-meetings held in South Australia. It was held on the Novar-Camden Park, Morphatville, a suburb of Adelaide. Everything seemed conducive to the good success of the meeting. The weather was ideal, the campers were faithful in their attendance at the meetings, everybody seemed to be happy and yet desirous of learning all that could be learned of the Word of God, and ministers and workers were led of God in presenting timely themes that were indeed "present truth." Yes, it was a very helpful meeting, and the oft-used expression, "This is the best camp we have ever attended," was no mere platitude.

Pastor S. Watson called his workers together every morning for a special season of prayer and counsel before the work of the day began with the devotional meeting at 6.30 a.m. We have no doubt about the value of this plan. In passing let us notice that it was splendidly attended by all the workers present on the ground. They earnestly sought God's blessing on the meetings of the day, and, too, prayed in a special way for the sick on the ground—and there were several such present. In every case these reported decided improvement. Truly God was present, not only to bless but also to heal.

A strong progressive and upbuilding work was done for the young people. We have in South Australia just as rich an heritage in our young people as we have elsewhere in our conferences. No more important work is done on our camp-grounds than that done for our young people. They are the hope of the movement. As our Lord seems to tarry, more and more they are needed to help carry on the message. And this will continue so to be until the earth is lightened with the glory of the third angel's message. Then what high privileges are enjoyed by faithful and devoted Seventh-day Adventist young people!

The business meetings of the conference passed off happily. Pastor S. Watson was re-elected president and only one change was made in the personnel of the conference committee. All the workers had encouraging reports to render, for all had been blessed with "sheaves for their hire." During the coming year a strong mission is to be conducted in Broken Hill, and all will pray and eagerly wait for results.

On both Sabbaths we saw good responses to the appeals for deeper spiritual life and more devoted service in the cause of our Master, the Lord Jesus. The Sabbath school offerings amounted to £61 16s. 8d. for the two Sabbaths. The gifts for missions on the last Sabbath afternoon amounted to £550. Pastors A. G. Stewart, Robert Hare, N. H. Faulkner, and the writer attended the meeting on behalf of the Union Conference. With March 30 came the closing of the meeting. The ten days had passed all too quickly. But, thank God, in this experience itself we have a lesson by contrast, for the camp-meeting of the hereafter will measure with eternity. May God help us all to be true.

A. H. PIPER.

Are We Afraid?

THE following from a private letter illustrates a point which is well worth considering:

"I went down to Mr. ——— on an errand, and he and his wife began the conversation upon Bible themes. He asked me several questions which I could not answer, but I told him I would furnish him tracts that would. One of his questions was, Who changed the day? This family is probably the wealthiest in our community. 'Now,' said he, 'you people have always been afraid to mention the subject to me, and because of this I have been afraid of you, too.'"

Is it possible, dear reader, that such a statement as this may be made about us when it is too late to answer satisfactorily?

H. H. HALL.

"WE are happy to announce that the effort in Hamilton, Scotland, has started under most auspicious circumstances," writes Pastor W. Maudsley, Superintendent of the Scottish Mission. "Brother L. Murdoch is leading out in the effort in this ancient town, twelve miles from Glasgow. It was gratifying to see a full town hall, an attentive audience, and a good response to the appeal for literature. Up to date there have been 120 applications for reading matter, though the effort has been in progress only two weeks. The collections also are good, and the interest is most promising."
