"What Shall We Do?"

THEN said they unto Him, What shall we do, that we might work the works of God? Jesus answered and said unto them, This is the work of God, that ye believe on Him whom He hath sent." John 6:28, 29.

These words were addressed to people who seemed very active in seeking to find the Lord. A vast multitude had the day before been fed on the other side of the lake by a few biscuits and two small fishes. Following this miracle Jesus had commanded His disciples to go by boat to the other side of Galilee (for they were intent by force to take Him and proclaim Him king), while He dismissed the multitude. A fierce storm arose, and while it was on, Jesus left His mountain retreat of prayer and, walking upon the sea, went to them. The dismissed multitude had spread the news of that miracle far and near, and now a much larger multitude had found Him on the opposite shore at work healing and teaching. To bring from Jesus' lips the account of these night miracles, of walking on the water, Peter's attempt, the calming of the tempest, and the marvellous way in which they reached the other side of the lake, without the disciples' effort in rowing (recounted to them by the disciples), they ask, "Rabbi, when camest Thou hither?"

"Ye seek Me," Jesus replied, "not because ye saw the miracles, but because ye did eat of the loaves, and were filled. Labour not for the meat which perisheth, but for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life." Then they asked the question and received the answer first quoted.

Deep indeed are the spiritual lessons taught us in these experiences and the Lord's words. Activity, even in seeking for the Saviour, may prove fruitless if the hidden motives of the heart are unworthy. Bustle and show, even in service known to be the service of God, in Heaven's sight may be counted valueless. Is there in the heart some hidden motive to exalt self? Is it to build up for one's self a name as being a this or that in God's cause? Has one hidden away down in his soul the thought of some personal, temporal advantage inspiring this seemingly very commendable activity for God? In the words of inspiration is it the question, "What shall we do, that we might work the works of God?"

If this is it, then know there is absolutely nothing such an one can do to work the works of God. Something very important must come first, and that one thing is the repentance of this sinful motive, the humbling of a proud heart by believing on and receiving Jesus into it. Until this is done, and self is lost sight of, no works of God can be wrought. To believe on Jesus means this:

> "Repentance is turning from self to Christ; and when we receive Christ, so that, through faith, He can live His life in us, good works will be manifest." —"Thoughts from the Mount of Blessing," p. 131.

When Christ works His work in us by giving us a new heart, then He will work His works for others through us,—receiving the glory and honour due His name for all that is accomplished. For such workers our Lord is seeking. He needs them in the homelands, He needs them in mission fields.

> "In choosing men and women for His service, God does not ask whether they possess worldly wealth, learning, or eloquence. He asks, 'Do they walk in such humility that I can teach them My way? Can I put My words into their lips? Will they represent Me?'"—"Ministry of Healing," p. 37.

Jesus has not changed in character since that day. He said of Himself, "I am meek and lowly in heart." It is not that college diploma, that medical sheepskin that is to decide the important question, "What shall we do, that we might work the works of God?" These

> "Lord, what a change within us one short hour
> Spent in Thy presence will suffice to make!
> What heavy burdens from our bosoms take!
> What parched grounds revive, as with a shower!
> We kneel, and all around us seems to lower;
> We rise, and all, the distant and the near,
> Stands forth a sunny outline brave and clear.
> We kneel, how weak! We rise, how full of power!
> Why, therefore, should we do ourselves this wrong,
> Or others, that we are not always strong;
> That we are ever overborne with care;
> That we should ever weak or heartless be,
> Anxious or troubled, when with us is prayer,
> And joy and strength and courage are with Thee?"

qualifications are good and may prove very helpful indeed, but beyond all this the possession of those still higher credentials, issued from the higher school of Christ, is necessary for the worker to work the works of God. "Do they walk in such humility that I can teach them My way?" "Can I put My words into their lips?" "Will they represent Me?" How heart-searching these questions! O, think of it! It is this same Jesus who broke the bread beside the sea who asks us these questions! The Lord of glory, He who possesses all power in heaven and in earth, asking us if we can humble ourselves enough to let Him put His words into our lips, to let Him teach us His way!

"God can use every person just in proportion as He can put His Spirit into the soul-temple. The work that He will accept is the work that reflects His image. His followers are to bear, as their credentials to the world, the ineffaceable characteristics of His immortal principles." "We are to be distinguished from the world because God has placed His seal upon us, because He manifests in us His own character of love. Our Redeemer covers us with His righteousness." —"Ministry of Healing," p. 37.

With this experience within, it matters not who you are, what your other qualifications may be, or in what line you are called to serve, it becomes possible for you to become where you are a worker for Christ, an ambassador for Him. God qualifies you by putting His words into your lips to speak for Him. And the motive of it all is ever to be that through love for Him burning in your heart He may use you to represent Him.

To illustrate how the Lord may use one, may put His words into lips, perhaps at an unexpected moment, and so win a soul to Jesus, we give a recent experience of a humble book worker:

"A good Christian mother ordered the book, then with tears in her eyes she said, 'It will do you no good to go upstairs. My daughter lives there, and I am sure she would not want one of those books, for she will have nothing to do with religion. She has four children who have never been taught anything about Jesus. I have prayed for her all these years, but it seems to do no good.' I told her that was just the place I wanted to go. So with a prayer on my lips I climbed the stairs to find it all too true. But the Lord heard the prayer, and as I talked with her and pleaded that she give her heart to God, and help her children along the way to the kingdom, tears began to fill her eyes. I reminded her of that Christian mother's prayers, and she said, 'I am going to accept sometime, and I may as well now.' We had prayer. She bought a book, and there were more tears, but they were tears of joy."

"Give ye them to eat." "This is the work of God, that ye believe on Him whom He hath sent."

News from Afar

To England and Back Again

IN response to earnest requests from my sister May in Bournemouth, England, who had undergone three serious operations for cancer, and was not expected to live, I laid down my work in Levin, New Zealand, on July 9, 1926, and hastened to England via the Suez Canal.

We reached Plymouth August 28, where I left the boat and took train on the 29th for Bournemouth via Exeter, Yeovil, Salisbury, etc., arriving at my sister's home at eleven o'clock the same night.

The trip all the way across was of great interest to me. We spent one full day in Colombo, Ceylon, but having stayed there four days in 1916, I was more or less acquainted with the town.

The Red Sea, anything but red in colour, though some days almost red in temperature, drove us on to the decks and hatches at night, and into the bath tubs during the day.

The orthodox clergyman on board assured a group of passengers with all gravity that the Israelites under Moses crossed the Red Sea by taking advantage of the low tide and running round the sea on the sand. I wondered what Moses would have said to that had he been there! Pharaoh's horses must have been very slow to have been caught by an incoming tide and overwhelmed.

The Suez Canal with its ninety miles of sand banks, and howling wastes of sand plains on either side, especially on the Arabian side, caused me to feel thankful that I was born amid much more congenial surroundings, and when I saw the skeletons of little Arab children, dressed in rags, running along the blistering paths beside the canal, towing heavy boats with Arab men in them, I thanked the Lord that my childhood days were spent in such a glorious land as New Zealand.

The Esperance Bay, our 13,800-ton boat, all one class, oil-burning, was one of the best it has been my pleasure to travel on, and we had a very congenial and companionable class of passengers on board, including about twenty-five naval men from Australia.

We passed the Sinai Mountains on a clear day, and the tallest peak, Mt. Sinai, silent witness of one of the greatest events in human history, God coming down to talk with men, attracted the attention and drew forth sundry remarks from all on board. The writer of these impressions, while passing by Sinai, carefully studied the law of God in its relations to the Christian world today, with a Church of England Christian man who was giving much thought to the subject.

Port Said did not impress me as being a place in which one would voluntarily choose to pass his days. There I saw child labour in cruel reality in furniture factories under what appeared to be the worst of conditions. I took advantage of an opportunity which presented itself while in England, later on, in attendance at a large meeting being conducted by members of the League of Nations and members of the House of Commons, to draw their attention to what I had seen under the British Flag.

Learning while in Port Said that the Patriarch of Constantinople was there on a special mission, and conducting services in the Greek Catholic church, I wended my way thither and became an interested observer of all that was being done. The chief thing to attract attention was the very profitable business being carried on in the sale of candles. What pleasure the Lord can take in the burning of lamb's fat or any other fat I fail to see.

All comers great and small, rich and poor, bought candles, larger or smaller, lighted them at a jet of flame and set them in boxes of sand or wire frames. And as in Tetzel's day, so now, the money "clinked against the bottom of the chest," but no Luther's voice is heard denouncing and challenging the traffic.

Priests in gorgeous robes of blue and scarlet and purple, bedecked with flashing jewels, flitted hither and thither, bowing, crossing, offering incense, and chanting in an unknown tongue. Revelation 17 seemed to be a very true description of what was seen.

The Mediterranean, the sea in the middle of the earth, proved to be a much larger body of water than I had expected to see. Our good boat took seven days to steam from Port Said to Gibraltar.

Gibraltar with its bald, concrete face turned to the Mediterranean, was also passed on a clear day and at close range, with the African coast in view away in the dim distance. A shoal of porpoises escorted us safely past the great oft-battered rock till we were beyond the range of its 365 guns, one for each day of the year, so we were informed, though we did not stop to land and count them, and then they, the fish, bade us good-bye and we steamed away past an ancient walled and fortified town of the Moors on our right, and on into the fog in the Bay of Biscay, where at any time from four to ten ships were in sight. Here foghorns boomed, bellowed, and blared, and well they might, for on one occasion when the fog lifted temporarily, a boat almost equal to our own in size was cutting directly across our bows and keeping as silent as the tomb, and not more than a gunshot range in front of us. Our old sea and sun-bronzed captain almost blew the vocal chords out of the larynx of the foghorn of his ship in his fury at such a disregard of the rules of the sea. As if to assure us of "safe conduct" henceforth, a flight of racing pigeons, eighteen in number, wearied from battling into the teeth of a sixty-miles-an-hour gale, came on board our boat and remained with us all the way to Plymouth.

No wonder people who come out to the colonies from England always refer to that land as "home." Who would not? What a charming and fascinating land it is, to be sure. How I learned to love its quaint little old fashioned towns, its cobbled streets, its winding country lanes, its cosy thatched cottages, its New Forest of 90,000 acres with all its changing glorious autumn colours, its ivy-covered walls of green and crimson and gold, its old castles, and towers, and monasteries, and cathedrals, and abbeys,—and I saw many of them,—its queer old inns with such names as "The Bird in Hand," "The Jolly Farmer," "The Pack Horse," "Crooked Billet," "The Cow Roast," "The Pig and Whistle," "The Hole in the Wall," "The Hen and Chickens," "The Adam and Eve," "The Cause Is Altered," "The Peter's Finger," "The Labour in Vain" with a picture of a white woman scrubbing a black baby, etc.

What a feast it is to ride from London to Glasgow and admire the farming lands of the country. Such thoroughness is not seen, as a general rule, in these colonies. Weeds have no chance on those immaculate lands. On some farms we counted up to seventy-five stacks of grain, and such crops of potatoes and turnips and cabbages and cauliflowers!

At Grimsby one Sunday we saw 800 steam trawlers, and we were informed that no less than 3,000 commission agents bought fish in that town.

It was a great privilege to come into close contact with our work and workers in England. To preach the truth in London's halls and churches, and to visit and spend some days at Stanborough Park at the Sanitarium, the College, the Food Factory, and Printing House, and to meet the men at the head of the work. We found the same devotion to the cause of God there as here, the same faith of Jesus, the same confidence in the message, and determination to stand by the work till it is done. Our people are very warm-hearted and given to kindness and hospitality. Our visit among them was a great delight, an inspiration, and a blessing.

My sister made wonderful advancement along the lines of recovery during my stay in England. We are hopeful that her life will be spared for many years.

Will Scotland Return to the Sabbath?

THIS was the title of an address given last Sabbath afternoon, December 11, in Glasgow.

I feel certain that readers will be interested to hear what is happening in this land just now, for there must surely be some Scotch blood in the veins of Australasian Adventists.

Scotland was about the last country in the world to abandon the true Sabbath, for she was still keeping it less than one thousand years ago. Now the invitation is being extended to her, to be called a "repairer of the breach."

To the inhabitants of Glasgow, the second largest city of the British Empire, the salient points of the truth are being presented in the largest picture hall of the city, accommodating about two thousand five hundred. If it held twice that number it would probably be filled, with additional advertising, for the people crowd to hear. At last Sunday night's lecture, the ninth of a series, the doors had to be shut a quarter of an hour before time, and I hear that people outside were pleading for admittance, having come long distances to hear the topic, "Hell, Is It a Myth or a Furnace?"

The effort is being conducted by Pastor Maudsley, who for the past two years has held similar campaigns in South London. His experience down there is very valuable to him at the present time, and the Lord is giving him favour with the people, the "question time" being especially popular.

A large number have given in their names for free literature, and the happy band of Bible workers is kept very busy climbing stairs. For Glasgow is built mainly on the block system. They use the term "closes." Down in England we call them "flats." Perhaps you do not go in for them over your way, but will understand.

This is my first visit to the home of the Celts, and I find the Scotch to be a very lovable people.

May we ask a place in your prayers, that there may be an abundant harvest from this land of "braw lads and bonny lasses"?

Our Mission Field

Malaita, Solomon Islands

IN answer to questions asked us concerning conditions in Malaita at the time we left that field for the homeland, we make the following report.

During the period we spent on the island we endeavoured to come in contact with as many of the bush people as possible, and after making a number of inland trips, we ascertained that the attitude of the natives in all the villages visited was most favourable toward our mission.

Previous to our arrival Brother Anderson had worked in this part of the field, and ere he departed for Australia we made a trip to some of the villages, with the result that at the village of Osigneau the people expressed a desire to take our mission. They made many promises and good resolutions, so a native teacher was left with them. Since then I have found that one cannot place too much reliance on their statements at first, and it will take many months of gospel teaching, and the working of God's Holy Spirit in their lives, before they realise what it really means to accept the mission of Christ.

Every Sabbath the women from this village and a number of children come down to the coast to our small meeting house for simple Bible instruction. They usually take this opportunity of trading their garden products for fish from the "salt water" (coastal) natives, then cook some food and have a smoke before gathering for a short Sabbath school service. Thus far the men from the village rarely attend, as they are too fond of gambling, an evil that has a strong hold on the people of Malaita. We look forward with joy to the day when these people will keep holy the Sabbath day in harmony with the Scriptures.

This island is the most thickly populated of the Solomon Group, about 65,000 to 70,000 being the estimated number of its inhabitants. Some thousands of the people on Malaita died in the recent influenza epidemic that swept through the group. That these have passed beyond our reach into Christless graves, should be a bugle call to us to hasten to send the messengers of the gospel to those who have never heard the sweet story of salvation.

Our work first extended four miles inland from the coast, but later by request Mrs. Gibson and I visited a group of villages about four miles still farther inland. The main appeal from these villages was that a mission school be established to teach their children.

At our own homestead there is practically nothing to report, as up to the present the "salt water" people appear indifferent to mission work, and seldom visit us except in cases of sickness, when they call upon us to visit them. Our message will advance only by the Lord's direction as we keep in constant touch with the people, by visiting them in their own villages.

Our present mission site is not accessible for the majority of the bush tribes, and another site is being cleared on the opposite shore of the harbour. This will be a distinct advance step and advantageous in many ways.

We have two centres of influence on Malaita at the present time, and from these centres has radiated the spirit of our message to quite a number of outlying villages. While the natives are making advancement, it is too early yet to expect true conversions to all the principles of our faith. A most promising couple who have taken a more definite stand than others are the parents of Jackie, a Malaita boy, who learned of the advent message in the Marovo district, and then, with his little wife (also from one of our missions in the Marovo) decided to win his people for Jesus.

On the coast line of Malaita there are many mission stations of other denominations, some having been established for fifteen years or more. The centre of the island, however, offers a great field of opportunity, as large areas are still untouched by gospel influences. It is from these parts that we hope, by the help of the Lord, to reap our harvest.

Naomi's Father a Converted Man

THE many friends of our mission work in the New Hebrides will be pleased to read the following experience of Malbraim of Atchin, Malekula, the father of Naomi, the child who was rescued from an untimely grave over ten years ago by Sisters Wiles and Parker and then reared in our home until our departure from Fiji about a year ago, when we left her in the Girls' School, Fiji, where she is at present.

I am sure that all who have read of the inhumane attitude on the part of this man who could concede to the burying alive of this infant with her mother's dead body, when the child was but two days old, will recognise the power of the gospel to save to the uttermost, when they know that today Naomi's father is a converted man, living on the mission property, and with his present wife is an adherent of the truth for this time, and a regular attendant at morning and evening worship and Sabbath services.

One of the finest testimonies I heard from a native believer during my recent visit to the New Hebrides was a personal testimony privately given me by this man. Near the close of our general meeting at Atchin, just two or three days after an impressive service held Sabbath morning, when the Spirit of God was present, I spoke to the people in their own tongue from the text, "In the last day, that great day of the feast, Jesus stood and cried, saying, If any man thirst let him come unto Me, and drink." Malbraim sought a private interview, and after inquiring interestedly, though not selfishly, about Naomi and her welfare, he told me that during the service when others wept he got a real victory over something that had been hindering him from a true surrender to God. He said that now it was entirely gone, and that whether I heard from him again or not I would know that he died on the mission as a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ of whom he had heard that Sabbath morning.

I then spoke to him of the importance of his going right ahead and preparing himself for baptism and getting ready for the kingdom of God. He said, "I leave that with you missionaries as to whether you see fit to baptise me or not, but in my own heart I know I have let go entirely of heathenism and other things that I had not fully given up before."

Malbraim is not very well, and has received a good deal of care and treatment from the workers there. His influence will be helpful in strengthening our work. He said he had watched its development from the beginning; how we had taken in boys and prepared them for baptism; of the growth in grace of some, and of the return to the heathen village of others. He said at first it was like trying to build a house from sticks cut from saplings. He sympathised with the boys in their peculiar temptations, but said these did not now appeal to him as an older man, and he assured me that heathenism had no more attractions for him. Though not strong physically, he would try to help the mission and be faithful unto death.

Ample Compensation

Needless to say that, as those who have cared for his child and have prayed for her father, we feel profoundly grateful for this good testimony. It amply compensates for years of labour spent in that hard field. A few days later, when about to leave the group to return home, I received several letters from Mrs. Stewart and the last statement in one was, "The burden of my prayers for you is that you can help some of those heathen on Atchin to the feet of Jesus. I'd gladly spare you a little longer if this could be done." We thank God for the promise, "He that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him."

May God greatly bless the workers who are privileged to labour for these souls, and may He use them in bringing still many more to the feet of our blessed Master.

A. G. STEWART.

The A.K. "Loloma"

WE know that our brethren and sisters in Australasia will be pleased to know that the auxiliary ketch for the New Hebrides Mission has arrived safely in the group.

I came to Vila by steamer on December 11 to meet the vessel when she should arrive. It being Sabbath, I was pleased to be able to spend the day with Brother and Sister Stanley McCoy of Vila.

Sunday morning at about eight a vessel steamed up the harbour, flying three flags. It did not take us long to travel the two miles to the water front, where we were delighted to recognise Brother McLaren and four Fijians, also a second white man, and to look for the first time on the long-desired vessel Loloma.

In due time the doctor gave the vessel clearance, and with some emotion we clasped hands with our brethren from Fiji who had so kindly volunteered to bring her across the ocean to us. Captain Steinbeck seemed about as happy as the rest of us.

In a group of islands like this the Loloma is a very striking vessel, and we heard many favourable comments during the two days she was in Vila, and from men who know much about ocean travel. The concensus of these opinions was that she was the nicest vessel of her size in the group, and we readily believe it.

In comparison with the vessels we have travelled in for years past, she is a real palace. What we appreciate most is that she is safe for inter-island work. With the small launches there was always a certain amount of risk, especially with many natives on board travelling to and from general meetings.

We left Captain Steinbeck, who had been in charge on the voyage from Fiji, in Vila, to take passage by a steamer direct to Fiji, while we set out on a twenty-hour journey to Atchin. We arrived Tuesday afternoon, and everybody was happy to see her, and now she was all but ready for work.

She had not been dedicated yet, so on Wednesday morning at the ringing of the bell, the people gathered on the beach. It was a representative gathering, probably one of the largest meetings we have had of Atchin people. Pastor Stewart spoke in the Atchin language.

Soon after the service was ended we left to visit the various districts where our work is located, and to gather our workers and teachers for a general meeting. The Loloma has already visited each mission station in the group, travelling over 600 miles, and carrying missionaries' household effects, even taking a cow and a calf to Ambrym for Brother and Sister Taylor. We believe she has done much to inspire the native believers in the group. We would express our appreciation to all who have laboured and sacrificed to give us this splendid vessel for the work in the New Hebrides.

We would especially mention Brother McLaren and the four Fijian brethren, as it was no small undertaking to bring such a small vessel across from Fiji at any time, but particularly at this time of the year when a hurricane may come along at any time. Finally we were loath to let them go. Brother McLaren and his men were in charge of the vessel until their steamer was pulling up her anchor. She then passed into less competent but enthusiastic hands.

We earnestly pray that the Lord will add His blessing that the greatest possible service may be rendered by Loloma in this needy field.

A Visit to Efogi

AFTER an absence of five months at the Bisiatabu mission, it was my privilege, in company with Brother Peacock, to pay a brief visit to Efogi to meet Naphtali and Timothy, who are holding the ropes until Brother and Sister Mitchell arrive.

As we had no way of letting them know we were about to visit them, our arrival was a great surprise, and oh, what excitement it caused! How different from the day we took our departure. As there happened to be a number of village folk there, as well as the school boys and girls on the mission, it added to the excitement.

They crowded about me, and while some put their arms around me others were touching me under the chin and saying, "Oh, Taubuda, Taubuda." With all the excitement I almost forgot to remove my wet clothes caused by a ducking in the river as a result of falling off a slippery log used as a bridge.

Naphtali and Vasiti [Vashti] with their school boys and girls were soon busy getting everything ready to make us comfortable during our few days' stay with them, and we enjoyed every minute we were with them. They are anxiously looking forward to the arrival of the new missionaries.

We learned a little concerning the feelings of the people the day we took our departure. We saw many tears flowing before we left, but Naphtali said there was a lot of weeping during that day. He said some of the old men and women were crying just like children, and they said that when their father and mother died they were very sad, but that that was only small in comparison with what they felt that day.

These little experiences help to draw our hearts nearer to the people and to God in our labours for them, and are evidence of the Holy Spirit's work upon their hearts.

NORTH NEW ZEALAND

PRESIDENT: W. R. SCRAGG
SECRETARY: P. G. FOSTER

Conference and Camp-meeting

THE thirteenth annual session of the North New Zealand Conference was held in conjunction with the camp-meeting, on the Strand Park, Lower Hutt, from December 28 to January 9. The grounds were almost in the centre of this progressive suburb of the capital city, and the large drill hall, the only building on the park, was made most suitable for kitchen and dining-room arrangements.

The Union Conference delegates were Pastors A. H. Piper, A. W. Anderson, W. J. Westerman, and H. E. Piper. These brethren gave good counsel on the various committees, and the spiritual meetings conducted by the visiting ministers as well as those by our own workers, proved a real feast of good things throughout the twelve days, and our people were thus strengthened to meet the perplexities of another year. We were also pleased to have with us Brother Edgecombe Miller as representative of the Signs Publishing Company. Brother Miller's help in the book tent was much appreciated, and even though the attendance at this camp was not so large as at the two previous meetings, yet our book sales were higher than we have ever known at any previous camp, the total sales being £244.

We were grateful to the citizens of Lower Hutt for the many favours bestowed on us; and all with whom we had to deal, particularly the mayor of the town, seemed anxious to do what they could to make our stay a pleasant one. The words of welcome spoken by that gentleman at our opening meeting clearly demonstrated this.

The president, in welcoming the delegates and visitors to the session, said he was encouraged by the good progress that had been made in the winning of souls since our last camp-meeting, over a hundred having been baptised, while about fifty more are preparing to take this step. Aggressive work has been conducted during the year at Gisborne, New Plymouth, Dannevirke, and Levin, and pastoral work in Auckland, Wellington, and Tauranga. A church building has been erected at Tauranga and we have also been granted the free use of a new hall built by the public for religious services. In the Gisborne district a church of twenty-four members has just been organised at Kaiteratihi, and because of the number of new members attending the Gisborne church, the old building has had to be remodelled and enlarged. At Levin, too, a church was organised a week before camp with a membership of fifteen, thus bringing our total number of churches up to twenty-six, with an aggregate membership of 1,207. The effort put forth in New Plymouth resulted in a goodly number being added to the church there, with several others still receiving studies. At Dannevirke the church has also been strengthened. There are thirty conference workers, in addition to our faithful band of colporteurs.

The treasurer's report revealed a decrease in the tithes and offerings as compared with 1925. The income from tithes for 1926 was £9,759. The total amount paid in by our members for local and foreign work (including tithe, but not including Appeal for Missions) was £16,611, making £14 4s. 2d. per capita. Included in this amount is the £1,936 given by our 36 Sabbath schools, the membership of which is 1,505; also £323 from the 674 members of our 22 Missionary Volunteer societies. The missionary activities of our members, both adult and junior, showed an increase in almost every line of work as compared with 1925. The conference aim of £2,650 for the Appeal for Missions campaign was exceeded by £8. Our members worked well, and all churches except six reached their respective goals.

The Book Department reported £4,426 worth of orders taken, this being £1,000 less than for the previous twelve months.

Five church schools were in operation at the close of the year with a total enrolment of ninety-seven, of whom sixty-seven are children of Adventist families.

Plans

The following is an outline of plans adopted:

An expression of heartfelt gratitude to God for His abundant mercies and preserving care by yielding to Him for service for the finishing of the work; giving our sister conference in the south a subsidy of £400 for evangelistic work during 1927; our hearty support and co-operation in the 1927 Appeal for Missions campaign, and the acceptance of the suggested Union Conference aim of £2,650 with a special endeavour to bring the campaign to a successful issue in four weeks; the need of careful and prayerful study of the Bible, also the writings of Mrs. E. G. White, particular stress being laid on the book "Early Writings," which is being published at this time at a lower price; the use of "Steps to Christ" in home missions work, special reductions having been made in the price of the pocket edition for quantities; inviting our members to engage extensively in the circulation of Life and Health, as this magazine contains so much helpful instruction on health principles, which are referred to in the Spirit of Prophecy as the right arm of the message; the continuance of special efforts to increase the circulation of the Signs of the Times, understanding as we do that this weekly paper has proved one of the most effective means of reaching the people in their homes with the message; the revival of the envelope plan for tract loaning; soliciting the help and co-operation that church members can give by depositing on loan with the Australasian Conference Association Ltd. such money as they may have available; the urging of members to observe due reverence in the house of God, and as far as possible to have all services commence and finish on time; warning our people, young and old, of the dangers lurking in, and discountenancing attendance at, modern amusements, such as moving pictures, theatres, and other questionable places; encouraging young and old to take up the M. V. Reading Course for 1927.

On the first Sabbath of the camp a very solemn service was held when Brother W. E. Battye was ordained to the gospel ministry; and on the last Sabbath morning, in answer to a call for consecration or re-consecration to God's service, there was a wonderful response on the part of both young and old. It was good to see about 130 come forward, thus expressing their determination to get the victory over sin. In the afternoon Pastor A. H. Piper brought before those assembled the great need of financial help for our island fields. Cash and pledges amounting to almost £600 were handed in. The amount is lower than previous years, but this is due to the fact that a number of old friends were absent who usually give very liberally to this worthy object, and also to the slight financial depression that there has been in North New Zealand during the past few months.

We look forward in hopeful anticipation to the future, for as God has been with us in the past we know that He will be with us to the end.

W. M. R. SCRAGG, President.
P. G. FOSTER, Secretary.

The School and Field Work in New Zealand

AT the North New Zealand camp-meeting held at Lower Hutt, very interesting reports were given by Pastor E. E. Cossentine, the principal of our Missionary School at Longburn, and Brother A. Kranz, the Bible teacher there.

The school has had an exceptionally good year, and those connected with the institution have much for which to praise God. The capacity of the school for boarding students is only 52, but 60 students were enrolled at the close of the year.

The work done by students in the industrial department is well worthy of commendation. Some of this was on view in a marquee erected close to the main preaching pavilion on the camp ground. The baskets, chairs, perambulators, etc., and the fine model of the school with all outhouses, demonstrated in a very clear way that everything possible is being done to help our young men and women to earn their way through school and to get the best education possible. This tent was a great attraction, for the display enabled many who had not had an opportunity of visiting the institution to form an idea of the kind of place wherein our young people are being trained. The faculty extends to any who have not yet visited the school a very hearty invitation to spend a day there and see for themselves. The main buildings are now being extended in order to provide accommodation for about thirty-six more students. A big enrolment is expected for this year. Pray for the success of our educational institutions.

The Allocation of Workers

Pastor L. R. Harvey, with Brother T. J. Bradley, is following up the interest at Lower Hutt awakened by the camp. Permission was given by the council to erect the tent on the same site as that on which our main pavilion was pitched, and the first meeting held on the Sunday night following the close of camp was well attended. Already these workers have the names of several with whom they may hold studies. Pastor W. E. Battye, with Brother A. Judge and Sister Conrad, is taking over the work in Gisborne. Pastor R. A. Anderson will continue in the Gisborne district until the time of his departure for Queensland in March.

Pastor F. L. Sharp has moved from Tauranga to Auckland, for the purpose of doing pastoral work in the "Queen City" as well as helping members in the giving of Bible studies and doing other lines of missionary work.

Brother and Sister H. L. Tolhurst, who sailed for Australia on the opening day of camp to visit their relatives before taking up their appointment in Tonga, left some interested ones in Dannevirke. These will be cared for by Pastor C. A. Paap, who arrived in Wellington from his trip to England, the day after camp closed.

Brother V. Nilsson has gone to Masterton to open up an effort in this important town. Brother O. K. Anderson is assisting in this mission.

Brother A. Barron and Sister H. Osmond will take up the work laid down by Pastor Harvey and his corps of workers in New Plymouth.

Sister B. Strange, who has been labouring for the past twelve months as Bible worker in connection with the Dannevirke mission, requested that she might be released for a time in order to assist her mother who has of late been in ill health. While we are sorry to lose Sister Strange from our field staff, yet it was felt under the circumstances that her wishes should be complied with.

The Church Schools

In connection with our church schools the following appointments have been made:

Brother G. Currow, who has been teaching in the Ponsonby (Auckland) church school, has gone to Gisborne to take charge of the school which is to be opened there in February. Brother Walter Whisker, who last year was graduated from the A. M. College, has gone to Auckland to take charge of the Ponsonby school.

Sister D. Ashton, who has also spent a year at Avondale, will take charge of the Hamilton church school, thus releasing Sister Beavis who has been appointed to the school at Wellington.

Sister Sutton has been called by the North N.S.W. Conference to take charge of the school at Quirindi.

Brother H. Kirk will continue with the Hastings school, where he, too, has done good work.

Sister Potter, whose reports from the State Inspector have been most satisfactory, but who has a special desire to further qualify for her work, made request for leave for twelve months in order that she might study for the "D" examination on the understanding that she be reinstated in the church school work in 1928. This request was granted on the conditions set down by Sister Potter.

Pray earnestly that God will bless each of these workers that many may be won to the truth through their labours.

P. G. FOSTER.

WEDDING BELLS

MARKEY–HARRIS.—On the afternoon of December 28, 1926, a number of relatives and friends gathered in the Perth Seventh-day Adventist church to witness the uniting in the bonds of holy matrimony of Brother Albert Markey and Sister Lessa Harris. The church was prettily decorated for the occasion. Brother Markey has been connected for some time with the work in the West Australian Conference, and Sister Harris has recently completed the nurses' course at the Sydney Sanitarium. We wish the young couple the rich blessing of our Heavenly Father as they render their united service to Him.

E. ROSENDAHL.

North N.S.W. Conference Annual Session

THE sixth Annual Session of the North N.S.W. Conference will be held (D.V.) in conjunction with the camp-meeting March 1-13, 1927, at Waratah. Once again the Municipal Council has kindly granted us the use of portion of the Waratah Park, and are anxious to do all they can to help make our camp a success. We have planned for a much larger encampment than on any previous occasion, and look forward to a large attendance of our people.

The opening meeting commences Tuesday night, March 1, at 7.45 o'clock. The first business meeting convenes at 10 a.m on Wednesday, March 2. We invite all duly appointed delegates from the churches as well as all others who will be in attendance at camp-meeting to be present punctually at the opening service.

R. E. G. BLAIR,
Secretary.

South Australian Camp-Meeting

THE twenty-seventh session of the South Australian Conference will be held in connection with the camp-meeting at Port Adelaide, March 8-20, 1927.

The first meeting of the conference will be held at 10 a. m., March 9, 1927, and we cordially invite all delegates to be present to take an active part in all the business of the session.

The usual departmental meetings will be held and reports given of the work accomplished during the year. Also Bible studies and public services will be held each day.

We expect to have with us a strong delegation from the Union Conference, whom we feel sure God will use in bringing blessing and strength to us.

"Come ye yourselves apart and rest awhile," is Christ's invitation. Kindly accept this invitation and be present at the camp.

L. D. A. LEMKE,
President.

Pastor Joseph Mills

PASTOR JOSEPH MILLS was born in Brisbane, Q., on October 22, 1883, and died at the Sanitarium at Wahroonga, N.S.W., on February 8, 1927, being a little more than forty-three years of age. Brother Mills accepted present truth in his native city when thirteen years old, as a result of having heard a series of cottage Bible studies. About eighteen months later he entered the Avondale School for Christian Workers, where he continued his studies for six years, being graduated from the Biblical-Academic Course in 1903. During his student days he served various branches of the cause at Avondale as stenographer, proof-reader, and bookkeeper. After graduation he was connected with the Union Conference office for a short time. In 1904 he taught the church school at Eugowra, N.S.W. and for the two succeeding years served as a teacher in the College at Avondale.

Pastor Joseph Mills
[Taken in West Australia]

Responding to a call to the foreign field, Brother Mills sailed in November, 1906, for Singapore, where he led out in our educational work, and also acted as secretary-treasurer of the mission. In 1909 the Union Conference called for our brother to connect with the New Zealand Missionary School at Pukekura, where he remained for six years, being principal of the school for the last two years. After spending a year in Australia, he again served as principal in New Zealand for three years.

From 1909 to the time of his illness, Brother Mills took a leading part in our educational work in Australasia. He was principal of the Australasian Missionary College for the year 1915. For the two years 1920, 1921, he was principal of the West Australian Missionary School. He was ordained to the gospel ministry in 1921. From 1922 to 1926 he again carried heavy responsibilities in connection with the Australasian Missionary College, leading out in important branches of the work, both in the classes and on the farm, while at the same time faithfully carrying the burdens that fell on him as pastor of the Avondale church. Having been at Avondale as a student during the later years of Sister E. G. White's work there, Brother Mills was well acquainted with the principles on which the College was to be operated, and was always a firm believer in them. From 1922 to 1926 one of his duties was to supervise the work on the farm. Sister White had always attached great importance to the part the farm was to play in the training work at the College, and in Brother Mills we had one who most earnestly and enthusiastically sought to work out these ideals, while at the same time burdened with many other duties.

While out in Singapore in 1907, our late brother was married to Miss Jeanette Glen Hamilton Carswell, his faithful companion through these years, who, with an adopted daughter of tender years, is left to mourn this great loss. Other relatives, all believers in the advent message, and some of them actively participating in the organised work, are as follow: Of his brothers, J. H. Mills, the eldest, is connected with our work in Brisbane; H. E. Mills is in our work in Adelaide; and W. E. Mills is a deacon of the Wahroonga church: of the sisters, Mrs F. G. Rampton is the wife of one of our Union Conference workers; Mrs Ballard is the wife of a member of the executive committee of the Queensland Conference; and Mrs. G. A. Marsh and Mrs F. Bunney also are faithful members of the Adventist church. Our hearts go out in sympathy to the bereaved wife and little one, and to all these sorrowing relatives.

Those of us who have known Pastor Mills for many years have always found him to be a true, loyal, and lovable Christian; and those of us who have been in close contact with him during recent years in the work at the College have seen that the experiences of life, as the years passed by, had evidently carried him into a closer union with and fuller conformity to the Master whom he served. Many times, during our recent association together at Avondale, have I reflected on his Christlikeness of character. I realise now, what I of course could not realise then, that the Lord was ripening the grain for the harvest. This comparatively sudden removal of our brother from what seemed to us to be the midst of his life's work, should be a lesson to us all. If we will let the Lord have His way with us, He will prepare us for our call, whenever it may come. Conformity both to the will and the image of our Redeemer and Lord must be our chief concern This, when all is over, at once moves forward in all minds to the rank of first importance, and is seen to have been the one thing that gave life's activities and endeavours in service any real efficacy or true value.

On Wednesday, February 9, after a service in the Wahroonga church, we laid our brother to rest for a little season in the Chatswood cemetery. Pastor C. H. Watson and other Union Conference officers, Pastor L. H. Wood, principal of the College, and other leading ministers, participated in the services in the church and at the graveside, which were attended by a large number of sympathising friends.

A devoted standard-bearer has fallen. He rests from labours; but his works follow him. He is dead; but yet speaks in the lives of workers in many lands whom he helped train for the Master's service.

"By Jesus' grave, on either hand,
While night is gathering o'er the land,
The sad and silent mourners stand.

"At last the weary life is o'er,
The agony and conflict sore,
Of Him who all our suffering bore.

"Deep in the rock's sepulchral shade,
The Lord by whom the worlds were made,
The Saviour of mankind is laid.

"O hearts bereaved and sore distressed,
Here is for you a place of rest,
Here leave your griefs, on Jesus' breast."

W. W. FLETCHER.

Returns Thanks

SISTER JOSEPH MILLS wishes to express her deep appreciation of the kind thoughts of the many friends as expressed through the medium of letters, telegrams, and floral tributes, and also to thank the doctors, matron, and nurses for the care which they so untiringly gave to her husband during his long illness at the Sanitarium.

Resolutions Passed by the Union Conference Committee

IN the minutes of the regular weekly meeting of the Union Conference Committee, held Wednesday morning, February 9, appears the following:

The chairman, Pastor C. H. Watson, mentioned the sad death of our late brother and pastor, Joseph Mills. Several of the brethren present spoke of the valuable service that our departed brother had rendered to the cause of God in Australasia, and it was—

Resolved, That we convey to his widow, Sister Joseph Mills, our profound sympathy for her in this the hour of her bereavement. Further, it was—

Resolved, That we place on record our appreciation of Pastor Joseph Mills' untiring zeal in the work of the third angel's message in this field, his helpful and loyal support in all matters pertaining to the Advent Movement, and his quiet but ever strong manifestation of the true spirit of his Master. We feel that a true, loyal, and devoted standard-bearer has fallen. A noble worker for God is no more. But he, though dead, yet speaks in the lives of many whom he has helped train for the Master's service.

A. H. PIPER,
Secretary.

AT the Tasmanian camp-meeting, to be held on the Glenorchy Showground, Hobart, from February 17 to 27, Pastors W. W. Fletcher and F. G. Rampton, also Pastor R. Hare, who is now in Tasmania, will be present as Union Conference representatives.

BROTHER and Sister C. H. Schowe, who have recently returned to Australia from America, have been appointed to the Australasian Missionary College. Brother Schowe will teach Greek and other subjects, and Sister Schowe will fill the positions of matron and domestic science teacher.

THE time for the opening of the 1927 Appeal for Missions is rapidly approaching. The regular date set for this is March 5; but the South N.S.W. Conference is beginning its appeal on February 19,—a fortnight early, in view of the visit of the Duke and Duchess of York to Sydney in March.

IT is with sadness that we record the death of Pastor Joseph Mills, which took place at the Sydney Sanitarium in the early morning of Tuesday, February 8. During his long years of service Pastor Mills became widely known throughout this Union, and his death will be mourned by all who knew him. A life sketch of Brother Mills appears in this issue.

BROTHER and Sister J. C. Radley sailed for the New Hebrides by the Marsina which left Sydney February 5. Brother Radley is under appointment as carpenter and engineer for the mission. They will be locating at the site of the new training school on the island of Aore, to assist in the preparation of the buildings for the school. Brother Radley's knowledge and experience in nautical and mechanical work will be of value to the work in that field.

SOME time ago we announced that Pastor Lock and Brother Peacock were about to start out on a 400-mile walk over the mountains in New Guinea, to select a site for the opening of a new mission station. They were prevented from taking this journey by an epidemic of mumps at the mission, but a little later they journeyed up the Vailala River, and were very favourably impressed with a place a few miles from the coast. Writing of it Brother Lock says: "There would be upwards of one thousand people close to where we would place our mission, and we would be in close touch with about six thousand natives. I think we can develop a strong mission there."

WE would call attention to the report by Brother F. D. Buckle from Scotland, which appears on another page of this paper. This was written especially for the RECORD. The wife of Brother Buckle is an Australian, and was well known to many of our readers as Miss Dorothy Knight. In the Missionary Worker, the official organ of the British Union Conference, this note appeared recently in reference to Pastor Maudsley's effort in Glasgow, in which Brother Buckle is helping: "Pastor Maudsley's great venture of faith in Glasgow is being abundantly rewarded. Still the crowds continue to flock to the meetings, as eager for the message as the thousands who attended the London meetings earlier in the year. Certainly a new time has come in the history of our work in the great cities of the land. The more bold the venture, the greater seems the blessing of God upon it. Evidently He awaits our launching out into the deep."

"Others"

WHEN, recently, a world leader of a great evangelical movement wished to send a message to all the workers scattered in all countries, that would inspire their zeal, he flashed along the wires and on the air the one word, "Others."

When the appeal was made last year during Big Week that the utmost be done for phases of the work in South America and South Africa, the girls of Monamona Aboriginal Mission heard the call on behalf of others, and not being able to sell literature or give money, they voluntarily went without their meals for the day in order that the cost might go to help "others." Late in the afternoon one little girl was seen leaning over a stool, and when asked why she was in such an attitude said, "When I press my stomach in I do not feel so hungry." She was willing to go hungry for the day for "others."

Today the call for another campaign on behalf of "others" is sounding forth throughout the Australasian Union Conference. We are approaching rapidly the opening date of the 1927 Appeal for Missions campaign. It is nothing short of wonderful how God has blessed this work year by year. It is now an established plan of years. We have educated the public to look for our Appeal magazine and give us of their means. In cases where we have missed them, any one year, several have asked the reason why they were passed by, and expressed disappointment, in that their sympathies are with us in our work. This condition of mind is as the Spirit of the Lord has indicated, "As those not of our faith have been made acquainted with the progress of the third angel's message in heathen lands, their sympathies have been aroused," and this word is written in connection with the Appeal for Missions work.

At a meeting recently held in the Town Hall in Wellington, the capital of New Zealand, Sir Charles Ferguson, the Governor-General of that Dominion, speaking on missions, is reported as follows:

"His Excellency expressed his approbation of mission work, and pointed out how the missionaries were rescuing the people from the depth of savagery and degradation, besides teaching them the gospel. The missionaries got the people both ways, teaching the gospel to them and elevating them at the same time."

He went on to say, "You pray every day, 'Thy kingdom come.' Do you mean it or do you not? If you don't mean it, don't say it; if you do, then here is a chance in which you can carry out your prayer."

What better way or chance have the Adventist people of helping on the cause of foreign missions than by engaging in the Appeal for Missions campaign?

If the thought of "others" can fire the zeal of another organisation, and if the thought for "others" can induce one of our own little aboriginal girls to go hungry in order that she might help them, if we pray, "Thy kingdom come"—and we do, then by the grace of God let us forget our timidity and our fears; let us put away our disinterestedness and lethargy, and let us as one man rise up and quickly finish the Appeal campaign for 1927.

Helen Spurrell's translation of Psalms 110: 3 is as follows: "Most willing will be Thy people in the day of Thy power." Do we not claim to be His people? Is not this the day of His power? Are we His most willing people?

A. H. PIPER.

Doings in Fiji

AFTER our teachers' institute at our Wainibuka school, Brother and Sister Steed and Sister Lane returned with me to Suva to do necessary shopping, and to meet Miss Edwards, who is coming to take charge of the native girls at our school up the river. However, as the steamer Tahiti was delayed, after spending Sabbath with us, Brother Steed returned, leaving his wife to welcome Miss Edwards and go on later.

On Friday, January 21, Miss Walker from our Australasian Missionary College, and Brother and Sister Blackwelder with their two children, and Miss Bailey, a Norfolk Island girl, passed through on the Sierra and spent the day with us. They expressed themselves as having very much enjoyed the time spent here, and felt they could understand mission life much better, and enter more fully into the problems that face the workers in the mission field.

On January 25, Miss Edwards, who has been for years at our West Australian Missionary School, and who spent two years in Fiji many years ago, again stepped ashore at Suva, and was soon out with us at the mission at Suva Vou. After spending a couple of days to do necessary shopping, etc., we put all luggage aboard the Talai and were off to Nausovi, the first stage of the journey up the river. Next morning we waved goodbye as they steamed away on the river boat, and we returned to Suva. Today, January 28, we have just met Brother and Sister Schowe and their two children, who are on the way back to Australia.

Brother and Sister Sprengel have arrived from Buresala to have some dentistry work done before commencing the new school year. So you see we have no time to be dull here at Suva Vou, as our visitors' rooms are nearly always occupied.
